Trim Racers Start Annual Swiftsure Classic

Most thrilling ocean sailboat race of the Pacific Northwest, the Swiftsure Classic, started from Victoria yesterday morning and should finish here between noon and 3 p.m. this afternoon. In the foreground at left is the Elusive which when last reported last night was in fourth place. Centre foreground is the Gometra from Vancouver.

Leading the race is the 67-foot-long yawl Maruffa, which in 1952 was first over the finishing line. She was expected to round the Swiftsure Lightship about 2 a.m. this morning on first lap of 126-mile ocean race.

But Polho III Favored

Maruffa Leading Swiftsure Racers

The 67-foot yawl Maruffa, owned and skippered by John Graham of the Seattle Yacht Club, took an early lead yesterday in the Swiftsure race and was expected to be first around the Swiftsure Lightship at an early hour this morning.

But favored to win the Pacific Northwest racing classic is the Polho III, owned by H. E. Richmond of the Seattle Yacht Club, which at 9.24 last night was following the American coast and running in third place.

Because of a handicap of approximately three hours in time the Polho III is favored to win. She was formerly the Gossip, owned by Charlie Ross, which last year romped home to its third Swiftsure win.

It won the 150-mile ocean race in 1949, 1950 and 1953, finished second in 1952 and missed the race in 1951.

The Maruffa carries a crew of 10 and is well known here. In 1952 she was first to cross the finishing line in the race. She has a handicap rating of 49.8 which is the biggest in the race at this time.

She will have to be away ahead of all other boats to win the event.

By 9.24 last night five of the 15 sailing craft had dropped out of the race.

The Armida, skippered by Karl Hosteter of Seattle, left the race at 3.55 because of lost gear and returned to Victoria.

Alotola, skippered by C. J. Frisbie of Seattle Corinthian Yacht Club, dropped out at 4.30 p.m. and returned to Victoria.

The Jenetta, owned by Doug and Wavell Urry of Vancouver, biggest yacht in the race and a favorite to win, dropped out at 4.28 p.m. and returned to Vancouver.

At 3.30 p.m., the Circe, skippered by Ray Cooke of Seattle, split her mainsail and returned to Seattle.

The Red Jacket, skippered by G. H. Parsons of Seattle Yacht Club, lost her mainsail early in the race, but hoisted another late last night and was again making its way up to the lead.

Positions at 9.24 p.m. were the Maruffa in the lead, followed at about two miles behind by the 52½-foot yawl Dorade, Seattle, about eight miles southwest of Port Renfrew.

The Polho III was a few miles to the east and nearer to the American coast. About eight miles to the rear was the Elusive in the centre of the strait followed by Adios, of Seattle, and Victoria's lone entry, Dragoon, skippered by W. B. Holms.

SMALLEST ENTRY

Smallest entry in the race, the Totem of Corinthian, was nearer the American coast around Clallam Bay. About 10 miles behind was the Gometra of Vancouver with the Colonist's Roy Murdock on board, followed by Reverie of Tacoma in the centre of the strait and Westward Ho of Seattle and Red Jacket of Corinthian.

Hundreds of Dallas Road spectators watched the start of the annual race yesterday morning at 10. Many hundred more are expected to watch the yachts cross the finish line at Brotchie Ledge this afternoon.

Experts predict that first boats will arrive back here between noon and 3 p.m. this afternoon.

Winds yesterday were light, ranging from southwest to west between eight and 15 miles per hour.

Ship Ends Testing Of Germs

LONDON (Reuters) — The Royal Navy confirmed yesterday that a British tank landing ship, Ben Lomond, has returned to Nassau after carrying out secret germ warfare tests in the Caribbean area.

The Ben Lomond was converted into a floating laboratory for the tests, which were made off the shipping routes and 20 miles from the nearest inhabited island.

Parley Might Ease Tension

GUATEMALA (AP) — Guatemala's President Jacobo Arbenz said Saturday a personal meeting between President Eisenhower and himself, "if it should take place, would help to ease the present tense situation in Central America."

Majority Reduced

Australians Return Menzies Government

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — Prime Minister Robert Menzies' Liberal-Country party coalition was returned to power yesterday with a reduced majority in Australia's 121-seat House of Representatives.

With final results still to be announced, the standing is expected to be:

Liberal-Country Party coalition—65.

Labor—56.

This would represent a switch of three seats.

Menzies, who ousted the Labor government in 1945, will now be able to turn his attention to major foreign policy decisions which were shelved during the election campaign. Chief among them is Australia's attitude toward a collective defense system for Southeast Asia and the western Pacific.

FREE OF PRESSURE

The five-power review of the Far East military situation, scheduled to open in Washington next Thursday, will now be able to get Australia's views free from electoral pressure.

Menzies' victory came as a surprise in many quarters, since private polls had indicated the gradual swing to Labor would bring back Herbert Evatt as prime minister.

Actually, Labor has received more votes than the coalition of ballots counted so far.

Sir Edmund Fighting For Life

NEW DELHI, India (UP) — Sir Edmund Hillary, who conquered Mount Everest exactly one year ago, fought for his life today on the slopes of another Himalayan mountain.

Precisely a year after he climbed the world's highest mountain, Hillary was being carried down from the 22,500-foot heights of the great Barun glacier with a broken rib and pneumonia.

There was virtually no news of his present plight, but the descent was a race to get out of the mountains before the vicious spring monsoon rains start next week.

Hillary broke a rib rescuing James McFarlane, another member of his expedition.

Although there was no definite word from the Hillary group, it was believed that an American expedition from California had rushed penicillin and an oxygen tent from Mount Makalu to help the New Zealander.

Saanich Gives Solid 'No' To School Loan Proposal

Only 778 Voters Back Referendum

Saanich School District 63 voters yesterday gave an emphatic "no" to a proposed $1,460,000 school loan referendum to provide new classroom space during the next five years.

Just over 30 per cent of the 5,178 voters turned out to vote 1,143 against the by-law and 778 for it.

Both the unorganized territory and Central Saanich sections of the sprawling school district voted a solid "no" vote, but the part of the district that lies within the boundaries of the Saanich municipality proper were for the building program.

The refendum was planned to provide facilities for an anticipated school population increase of 1,000 children during the next five years. Present attendance in the school district is 1,900 pupils.

"Let's see what the ratepayers tell us now," G. F. Gilbert, school board chairman of School District 63 said last night. "The school kids will have to stick their heads out of the school windows or go to school in swing shifts," he said.

In an official statement he said: "The board regrets the ratepayers have found it necessary to turn down the by-law referendum. The trustees did their best to acquaint the ratepayers with the district's school requirements. These still exist. What now is the ratepayers' wish?"

FEELING APPARENT

But talk around polling booths yesterday indicated the feeling of the ratepayers toward the proposed program.

"Too many frills. When they get down to brass tacks and build something for reading, writing and arithmetic we will be all for it," said one Brentwood man.

A North Saanich man said: "By the time my two children have filled all their extra-curricular activities they are too worn out to do their homework."

Another man said he would vote "yes" when the school children learned something at school. He claimed that nowadays they couldn't even spell properly or even do simple arithmetic.

Another voter claimed threat of swing-shifts was used as a bogey to make people vote "yes." A farmer said: "If this goes on much longer they will tax us out of existence."

'NO' VOTE URGED

This feeling was echoed by many voters who urged a "no" vote on "all of these things until such time as a more equitable form of financing was found."

Reeve Pickles' earlier charges of a "blank cheque" was enlarged upon by a Brentwood voter. "I wouldn't even give my wife a blank cheque, and I think a lot of her," he said.

A Brentwood woman agreed new schools were needed. "We need schools. Everyone agrees with that, but we need schools to be used as schools and not social houses for the children," she said.

George L. Chatterton, by-law committee chairman, said yesterday that if the by-law was defeated the provincial government would be asked to incorporate part of rural Saanich School District 63.

The school district now includes the north part of Saanich, Central Saanich, Sidney and unorganized territory. Mr. Chatterton, who is a school trustee, said the present school district was unsatisfactory because it was divided between an urban and rural population whose needs differed entirely.

"I understand the problem and the views of the population," he said. "Their interests are not compatible."

He said he would give serious consideration to the question of incorporating the north part of Saanich, which includes Royal Oak and Cordova Bay with the Greater Victoria school system. Another alternative, he said, was the forming of a separate school district for the municipality of Saanich.

Saanich council has already requested the government to form a separate school district for the municipality on the grounds that the present system is unfair to some of the taxpayers. The greater part of the municipality, the inner section, is linked with Greater Victoria School District 61.

LAST APPROVED

Yesterday's by-law referendum was the first submitted to District 63 ratepayers since 1950. The last one, for only $600,000, was approved by a slim 55-vote majority.

Result by polls:

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Sidney | 106 | 261 |
| North Saanich | 29 | 63 |
| Deep Cove | 62 | 113 |
| McTavish Road | 26 | 101 |
| Sansbury | 43 | 50 |
| Brentwood | 58 | 123 |

French Break Siege

HANOI, Indo-China (AP) — Five thousand French Union troops, including mobile artillery units, Saturday broke the Vietminh siege of Yen Phu, in the biggest offensive by the French since the fall of Dien Bien Phu. The rebels scattered into the hills around Phy Ly, 30 miles south of Hanoi, under heavy air, artillery and ground attack.

Yen Phu, a strategic defense post six miles from the big communications centre of Phy Ly, had been under siege for 18 days. Its defending garrison of only 160 men had been supplied by air.

French pilots dropped arms and supplies to two other small delta posts which have been under rebel siege for about a week. They were Xathi and Tayam, about 25 miles southwest of Haiphong, the big port city which receives most of the American supplies for the Indo-China fighting.

Tanks, armored cars and infantry drove from the Nam Dinh and Phy Ly sectors to relieve Yen Phu.

Armistice Violated

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United Nations command has directly charged the Communists with violating the Korean armistice by moving war planes and other military equipment into North Korea. It was disclosed Saturday.

Assassin Misses Premier

TUNIS, Tunisia (UP) — A would-be assassin fired two shots at Tunisian Premier Mohammed M'Zali yesterday, but missed, police reported.

Police said the gunman shot at the recently appointed premier as he left his office to meet French Resident-General Pierre Voizard, who returned yesterday from Paris. The would-be assassin escaped through the narrow streets of the old Arab city.

The shooting was the climax of recent unrest in this French protectorate and Morocco.

Reports from Casablanca in the neighboring North African territory said terrorists roamed streets in a car this morning shooting at pedestrians, wounding four Moroccans.

Damsel Sends Duelers Hurrying Off to Pub

OXFORD, England (UP) — Undergraduates Ronnie Eden and Alastair Forsyth stood back to back, marched 12 paces, then turned and fired blank cartridges at each other in a "duel" over a woman in a meadow behind Christ Church College.

The "woman"—pretty art student Prudence Taylor—arrived at the scene on the arm of a third man and applauded loudly.

Eden and Forsyth glared at her and went to a nearby pub to buy each other a drink.

$30,000 Worth of Happiness

Cheerful Army To Aid Village

A cheerful army of more than 1,700 men and women will call at every home in the Victoria area between 6.30 and 7.30 p.m. Monday seeking 30,000 "happiness dollars" to finance the completion of Kiwanis Village for deserving senior citizens.

Success of the drive will mean that low-rent homes can be built at the village on Cedar Hill Road for a total of 80 elderly citizens who otherwise would find it difficult or impossible to make both ends meet on their low, fixed incomes.

The village now provides homes for 22 elderly couples.

DOZEN MORE

The $30,000 objective of the drive will build 12 more double-occupancy homes and eight for single occupants who will vacate double unit homes.

While accommodation will be provided for 80 senior citizens at any one time, over the years the total will be much greater than this, due to turnover in occupancy.

Today has been declared Senior Citizens' Day at Kiwanis Village.

The S. J. Willis Junior High School senior band will give a concert on the grounds of the village between 2.30 and 4 p.m. and at the same time the public will have an opportunity of seeing the arrangement and general character of the village.

PRIVATE STREET

Kiwanis Village is located on the west side of Cedar Hill Road in the 2900 block. All homes face on Hibberson Crescent, a private road running through the property.

First six units of the village were opened and occupied last July. Another 16 dwellings have been completed and occupied since the beginning of this year.

The Victoria Kiwanis Club, keenly aware of the fact that Victoria has more than the average number of senior citizens who must get by on small pensions, decided to build the village several years ago.

The village has been designed to provide low-rent homes for deserving elderly couples, who through no fault of their own have seen their savings diminish or been wiped out entirely by the inflation of the past few years, and now find it a real hardship to exist on their pensions or small fixed incomes.

$250,000 SPENT

Some $250,000 has already been spent in construction, made up of a provincial government grant, a mortgage and contributions by Kiwanis Club members and some interested members of the public.

The $30,000 which Kiwanians hope to gain in their one-hour drive Monday is the proportion being asked of the public of an estimated $100,000 required to build 20 more housing units.

Villagers enjoy a feeling of independence which most of them could not enjoy if they felt they were accepting charity.

They pay $20 a month rent plus a fixed fee for electricity for lighting, heating and cooking.

Aged couples know they will be able to remain at the village as long as they live and that they will not have to separate and be forced to enter institutions because of economic circumstances.

Contributions to the village-completion drive will enable more senior citizens to enjoy a life of serenity, and this is why Kiwanians are calling on Victoria citizens to "invest your Happiness Dollars in Kiwanis Village."

Contributions to the drive are deductible for income tax purposes.

Modest Pope Pius X Proclaimed Saint

ROME (UP)—Pope Pius X, a man who never wanted to be a bishop, a cardinal or a pope, was proclaimed a saint of the Roman Catholic Church yesterday.

ST. PIUS

Pope Pius XII, who was made a monsignor by Saint Pius X, performed the outdoor ceremony before an estimated 350,000 persons jammed into massive St. Peter's Square and adjoining streets. The crowd included an all-time record 70,000 pilgrims from other lands, including many from the United States.

A hot sun that sent the mercury into the 80's beat down on the cheering throngs representative of "the millions more gathered at their radios around the world for the first canonization of a pope in 242 years. Bright red and orange umbrellas, shields against the sun, added to the colorful scene in the square.

In a speech to the assembled crowd and the radio listeners, the 78-year-old reigning pope expressed the wish that the spirit of the new saint would "penetrate the conference halls of nations" to help in banishing forever "the fear of cataclysms."

Pius XII invoked the new saint directly, asking him to "bring it about that this troubled world witness the triumph of that peace which should mean harmony among nations."

The present pope, recently recovered from a serious illness, proclaimed firmly in Latin from his throne of gold: "... We decree and define saint and inscribe in the book of saints the blessed Pope Pius X ..."

Fido Stands Guard At Parking Meter

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Louis Trapolina, a parking meter collector for more than 15 years, limped home yesterday.

A vigilant dog leaped from a parked car and bit Trapolina when he emptied the parking meter in which the dog's owner had deposited a nickel.

With G. E. Mortimore

A CAFEMAN claims that serving wine and beer is "not as profitable as was expected."

Labor costs have increased, he says. "It looks like a small net profit for a lot of extra work," he is quoted as saying.

Now look, Mr. Cafeman. It's good to see a [illegible] It is greatly to Victoria's credit that there was no stampede to the licensed restaurants; none of the drunken orgies that some people feared.

Those things are good. But let's not push our luck too far, Mr. Cafeman.

The statement about a small net profit and extra labor costs is plain old-fashioned tripe.

Cafemen buy local beer for less than 20 cents, and sell it for 35. That means a gross profit of more than 75 per cent. I know a cafeman has rent, wages and other expenses to meet, but I'm sure there is plenty left of the 75 per cent markup after the bite comes out of it.

And why should a cafeman have to hire extra hands to open a bottle of beer? He doesn't hire extra waitresses to open bottles of pop, which are opened exactly the same way.

Cafemen can buy Canadian wine for approximately $1 a bottle and sell it for a total of $3.50, or thereabouts. That makes 250 per cent gross profit—a tidy return.

If the beer and wine is "not as profitable as was expected," I shudder to think how much profit that cafeman expected to make. He must have been ready to drag his coin to the bank in trucks and earth-moving machines.

What the cafeman meant to say was that beer and wine failed to bring in the expected shower of wealth, but yielded only a modest total. The percentage of profit is fairly high, despite anything the cafemen say.

Nobody grudges the cafeman his profit. Let him make as much profit as the traffic will bear, and more strength to his beer-opening elbow. But please, Mr. Cafeman, don't insult our intelligence with claims that are transparently false.

Some tedious, meddling Scots churchmen have scolded the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh for removing their shoes to enter the Temple of the Tooth in Ceylon.

The opinions of these Celtic nobodies are of small interest, but I am grateful to them for stirring up a few memories of Ceylon. To be honest, I can't remember whether I took off my shoes or not when I entered the Temple of the Tooth. I went in there often enough. If custom says you take off your shoes, then you do it, monarch or commoner.

I remember the beautiful town of Kandy lying in a bowl of the hills with the lush tropical forest close by; the lake shimmering in the moonlight, and drums throbbing from Dalada Maligawa, the Temple of the Tooth.

Naked to the waist, the temple drummer pounds out a strange rhythm among pools of shadow cast by a flickering lamp. Entering, you can dimly see the murals that depict the punishments of the next world—blue demons pouring liquid fire down the drunkard's throat, and other just and unspeakable tortures.

Up in the holy room where Buddha's tooth is kept hidden away, the air is heavy with the scent of jasmine and frangipanni blossoms which the devout are busily piling on the floor. A Buddhist priest in saffron robes is there to accept them.

The scented darkness of the jungle trails and roads . . . the sharp aroma from the street of dried fish shops . . . the sacred turtles in the lake . . . the temple elephants bathing in the river . . . monkeys at the toddy tavern . . . Mrs. Pereira's hot curries . . . the botanical gardens, where you can find every kind of plant from the Holy Ghost orchid to bay rum, citronella, and tasty little mangosteens . . . drums from the temple; a warm wind.

Beautiful, beautiful Kandy. I intend to see her again one day, before I am too old.

Eat and Grow Younger

Hearty Meals Can Be Made Without Meat

This is another in a series of daily articles from the best-selling book, "Eat and Grow Younger," which provides invaluable information on nutrition, and one of the simplest and most effective of diets. By following the tenets set out here, you can literally eat and grow younger.

BY LELORD KORDEL

SEED NUT LOAF

½ cup hulled sunflower seeds, finely chopped
⅓ cup sesame seed meal
⅓ cup walnuts or almonds, finely chopped
1½ cups cooked lima beans, mashed
1½ cups cooked carrots, chopped
2 tbsp. minced onion or chives
3 eggs, lightly beaten
1½ tbsp. cooking oil or melted butter
1½ cups milk
1½ cups solft whole-grain bread crumbs
salt to taste
dash of paprika
2 tsp. lemon juice

Add the milk and lightly beaten eggs to the crumbs and combine all ingredients. Pack into a well-greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F) for 45 minutes, or until firm. Serve with tomato, cream or mushroom sauce. This is a valuable high-protein loaf that can safely take the place of meat or fowl in a meal. Serve with a tossed green salad, a cube of cheese and a fruit cup.

TAMALE LOAF

1 cup millet meal, or yellow unbolted cornmeal
1 small can mushrooms, or 1 pint fresh mushrooms
4 tbsp. cooking oil
1 tbsp. minced onion (optional)
1 clove garlic
4 tbsp. grated Italian cheese (Parmesan or Romano)
¾ cup grated Cheddar cheese
2½ cups canned tomatoes
3 cups hot water
½ cup cold water
1 tsp. salt
pinch of sweet basil and sweet marjoram

Saute the onions (if used) in the heated oil; add the mushrooms and saute lightly, then stir in the tomatoes, half of the salt and the garlic. Allow to simmer very slowly for about 1½ hours, stirring frequently to prevent sticking. (The garlic clove may be removed after the first 30 minutes, if only a mild flavor is desired.)

Then prepare the mush by mixing the meal with cold water, and adding gradually to the salted boiling water, stirring until the mush thickens and bubbles to a boil. Lower the flame and cook over a slow fire for about 12 minutes longer.

Place a layer of the mush in the bottom of a greased shallow casserole or baking dish, cover with a layer of the tomato-mushroom sauce, add a third layer of the grated Cheddar cheese, and repeat, ending up with a topping of the mush sprinkled with the grated Italian cheese, making sure to save some of the sauce to serve over the tamale loaf.

Bake uncovered in a slow oven (300 deg. to 325 deg F) for about 30 minutes. Serve with a tossed green salad, and for dessert add an orange custard.

EGGPLANT STEAKS

1 large eggplant (firm, glossy and dark purple)
4 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup grated Romano cheese pinch of salt
cooking oil or melted butter
1 garlic clove

Peel the eggplant, slice into ¼-inch "steaks" and sprinkle very lightly with salt. Pile one slice on top of the other, cover with a heavy plate and allow to stand for one hour in order to extract the acrid juices which cause some persons to dislike this valuable member of the vegetable kingdom.

Rinse thoroughly with clean water, then dry each slice thoroughly. Make a batter of the eggs, cheese and salt. Dip the eggplant steaks into this batter and drop into a heavy skillet containing the heated shortening in which the clove of garlic has been lightly browned. (If you keep a jar of garlic oil on hand, this will not be necessary.)

Allow each side of the steaks to cook over a medium flame for about five minutes, or until golden brown. Serve hot with a green salad bowl, a portion of cottage cheese and a fruit pudding or sherbet.

CHEESE NUT LOAF

1 cup chopped walnuts
4 tbsp. sunflower seed meal, sesame seed meal or a mixture of both
1½ cups grated American cheese
1 cup dry whole-wheat bread crumbs
2 eggs, well beaten
2 tbsp. chopped chives, or 1 tsp. minced onion
½ cup milk
4 tsp. cooking oil or melted butter
2 tbsp. lemon juice
dash of mace or nutmeg
salt to taste

If onions are used, brown lightly in the fat, add the milk, then blend into the bread crumbs. Stir in the well-beaten eggs, add the grated cheese, nuts, seed meal, lemon juice, chives and seasonings. Mix well.

If too stiff add enough more milk to form a molded loaf. Pack into a greased loaf pan, top with a few of the bread crumbs held in reserve, dot with butter and bake in a slow oven (300 deg. to 325 deg. F) for 30 to 40 minutes. This makes a nutritious, satisfying entree, and should be served with a cooked green vegetable, a green salad and a fruit dessert.

With a little ingenuity and experimentation, you can concoct other delicious high-protein meat substitutes from adaptations of those I have given you as a starter.

Hound of The Baskervilles

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

(Published by arrangement with the estate of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. World rights reserved. Illustrations copyrighted, 1954, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.).

Dr. Watson investigating the mysterious death of Sir Charles Baskerville and trying to protect his heir, Sir Henry, is at Baskerville Hall. He has just made the acquaintance of a neighbor, Jack Stapleton, when a weird cry drifts over the moor.

I looked round, with a chill in my heart. Nothing stirred over the vast expanse save a pair of ravens, which croaked loudly from a tor behind us.

"You are an educated man. You don't believe such nonsense as that?" said I. "What do you think is the cause of so strange a sound?"

"Bogs make queer noises sometimes. It's the mud settling, or the water rising, or something."

"No, no, that was a living voice."

Well, perhaps it was. Did you ever hear a bittern booming? It's a very rare bird—practically extinct—in England now, but all things are possible upon the moor. Yes, I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns."

"It's the weirdest, strangest thing that I've ever heard."

"Yes, it's an uncanny place altogether. Look at the hillside yonder. What do you make of those?"

The whole steep slope was covered with gray circular rings of stone, a score of them [illegible] Sheep-pens?"

"No, they are the homes of our ancestors. Prehistoric man lived thickly on the moor and, as no one in particular has lived there since, we find all his little arrangements exactly as he left them. Neolithic man grazed his cattle on these slopes, and he learned to dig for tin when the bronze sword began to supersede the stone axe. Look at the great trench in the opposite hill. That is his mark. Oh, excuse me an instant! It is surely Cyclopides."

A moth fluttered across our path, and Stapleton was rushing in pursuit of it. The creature flew straight for the great mire, and my acquaintance never paused for an instant, bounding from tuft to tuft behind it, his green net waving in the air.

I was standing watching his pursuit with a mixture of admiration and fear lest he lose his footing in the quagmire when I heard the sound of steps and, turning, found a woman near me upon the path. She had come from the direction of Merripit House.

I could not doubt that this was the Miss Stapleton of whom I had been told, since I had heard someone describe her as being a beauty. She had [illegible] regular that it might have seemed impassive were it not for the sensitive mouth and the beautiful dark, eager eyes. With her perfect figure and elegant dress she was, indeed, a strange apparition upon a lonely moorland path. Her eyes were on her brother as I turned, and then she quickened her pace towards me.

"Go back!" she said. "Go straight back to London, instantly!"

I could only stare at her in stupid surprise. Her eyes blazed at me.

"Why should I go back?" I asked. "I've only just come here."

"Man, man!" she cried. "Can you not tell when a warning is for your own good? Go back to London tonight! Hush, my brother is coming! Not a word of what I have said. Would you mind getting that orchid for me among the mare's-tails yonder?"

Stapleton had abandoned the chase and came back to us breathing hard. "Halloa, Beryl!" said he, and it seemed to me that the tone of his greeting was not altogether a cordial one.

"Well, Jack, you are very hot."

"Yes, I was chasing a Cyclop- [illegible] have missed it!" He spoke unconcernedly, but his small light eyes glanced incessantly from the girl to me.

"You have introduced yourselves, I can see."

"Yes, I was telling Sir Henry that it was rather late for him to see the true beauties of the moor."

"Why, who do you think this is?"

"I imagine that it must be Sir Henry Baskerville."

"No, no," said I. "Only a humble commoner, but his friend. My name is Dr. Watson."

A flush of vexation passed over her expressive face. "We have been talking at cross-purposes," said she.

"Why, you had not very much time for talk," her brother remarked with the same questioning eyes.

"I talked as if Dr. Watson were a resident instead of being merely a visitor," said she. "It cannot much matter to him whether it is early or late for the orchids. But you will come on, will you not, and see Merripit House?"

Central America Tense, Jittery As Communism Gets Toehold

GUATEMALA (AP) — Communism, with a toehold in Guatemala, is touching off new tensions and jitters throughout the rest of Central America.

The lush tropical republic on the approaches to the Panama canal are being flooded by rumors of war, new labor upheavals, charges and counter-charges to add to their age-old tradition of distrust for each other.

FEARS SPREAD

Fears of Communism's spread in the Western hemisphere boiled over last week when Guatemala brought in a big shipment of arms from behind the Iron Curtain, and Washington countered swiftly with airlifts of arms to neighboring Honduras and Nicaragua.

These events capped months of seething unrest over the Communist issue throughout this rich banana and sugar cane area.

The Kremlin target primarily is, of course, the United States. The Reds are finding a fertile field for seed of distrust among the workers employed by the United Fruit Co. and other U.S.-owned concerns which have a prominent part in this area's economy.

The area's measure of confidence in the United States has been shaken in recent months by Red propaganda.

The current Communist aim does not appear to be to attempt the violent overthrow of governments to set up openly Red satellite regimes, but to infiltrate, expand and seize as many positions of power and influence as possible.

Under the left-wing government of President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman, the Reds have had their greatest success in realizing this aim in Guatemala.

An avowed Communist party member controls the big 80,000-member Guatemalan General Labor Confederation. A fellow-traveler who has trekked to Moscow and to Kremlin-sponsored "peace" rallies in central Europe heads the only other labor force—the National Confederation of Farm Workers.

Reds hold seats in Parliament and weigh heavily in the government's radio and information services, as well as the social security system.

NOT COMMUNIST

Arbenz is not a Communist, but his declarations in recent times appear to hew closer and closer to the Moscow line.

Squabbles among the Central American nations themselves have become more heated over the growing issue of Communism.

Nicaragua, under the 20-year rule of strong man President Anastacio Somoza's right-wing government, abruptly broke off relations with Guatemala this month with charges that the Guatemalan embassy in Managua was used as a Red propaganda centre.

Somoza also has carried on a long-term feud with Costa Rica, whose anti-Communist government under President Jose Figueres has pushed a social improvement policy.

PLOT CLAIMED

Nicaragua has accused Costa Rica of supporting a plot to assassinate Somoza. Costa Rica not only denies this, but in turn has called on the organization of American states to investigate "unfortunate revolutionary activities" in Nicaragua aimed at the Figueres government.

Honduras, next door, expelled two Guatemalan consuls last month on charges that they had something to do with that country's first major strikes affecting workers in the rich banana plantations, factories, breweries and mines.

The fifth Central American country, El Salvador, thus far has not become openly involved in these feudings, but has been sitting nervously on the sidelines.

Payments For Welfare Set Record

With a total of $5,690,349, federal welfare payments in British Columbia during May set an all-time record, according to W.R. Bone, regional director, department of national health and welfare.

Of this amount $3,458,260 was paid to 85,980 old age security pensioners and $2,232,089 was in the form of family allowances. The latter was paid on behalf of 368,472 children in 181,650 families.

During the month 481 families in receipt of family allowances left B.C. for other parts of the Dominion, while 363 families came to this province. One hundred and seven pensioners left B.C. while 93 entered.

Choice of Moderator Sign of Church Union

AKRON, O. (AP)—Dr. Albert Kelly of Pittsburgh was unanimously elected Wednesday night as moderator of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, holding its 96th general assembly here. His choice as moderator is seen as virtual assurance that the assembly will vote for unification with two other Presbyterian branches — the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America and the Southern Presbyterians. # Prune, Feed Your Wisteria

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Care of Wisteria—J.E., Esquimalt. It is not unusual for an old Wisteria to develop a penchant for skipping every second year in its flowering, but I think you can correct this by instituting a careful program of feeding and pruning.

Give your vine a heavy mulch of old manure every fall, remembering that the roots of a 50-year-old plant probably extend at least six feet out from the main stem. This should be dug in carefully in the spring.

The pruning is done in midsummer, and consists of cutting back all the long straggling growths except those needed for climbing. These should be shortened to half their length, and this induces the formation of little spurs along their length which will bear next season's flower clusters.

I am afraid there isn't much you can do to help this year's crop of bloom.

Flowerless Lilac — A. R., Parksville. Just like Mr. E's wisteria, your healthy lilac which won't flower needs a program of feeding and pruning, only in your case the pruning is a bit more complicated. Pruning is done in winter, and consists of removing completely all the weak and thin wood in the tree, leaving only two or three main stems with their attendant branches. Search around the base and make sure there are no suckers—in fact, no growth from below ground at all except the two or three strong stems you have selected. This is done every three years. Next year you should have a few flowers, but they will be very large. In 1956 there will be a lot more flowers, still of good size, while in 1957 the quality of the flowers will start to deteriorate again, and if pruning is not done again that winter, there may be no flowers at all the following year.

The bush should be fed every second year, putting down a 4-inch layer of rotted manure around the lilac, covering an area equal in diameter to the height of the bush. This goes on in early spring, and should be dug in immediately, spading the area over again every month throughout the summer.

Don't use chemical fertilizers on a lilac, as they stimulate the growth of wood and leaves at the expense of flowers.

Sick Daphne—P.B., Portage Inlet—I am afraid your hard clay soil is just about the worst possible texture for a Daphne. They like a loose, well-drained sandy loam, neither acid nor alkaline in character, but as close to neutral as possible. The fact that the nearby Camellia is doing so well would indicate that your soil is slightly acid—possibly too much so for the Daphne.

I suggest that you lift your plant carefully and replant it in a spot where the ground has been cultivated more deeply, or you can prepare a site by digging out the clay and substituting a mixture of ⅓ rich loam, ¼ coarse sand, and ¼ peat moss, with 1¼ cupfuls of ground limestone added. Make sure, in preparing the site, that you are not creating a sump hole for winter water.

Give your Daphne plenty of water, both to the roots and overhead, throughout the summer.

Emergency Act Expires Monday; Some Orders Kept

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—On Monday, the Emergency Powers Act will expire after having been in effect for several years since the United Nations action in Korea.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced in the House of Commons some weeks ago that the government would not ask parliament to extend the Emergency Powers Act for another year.

At the time, Mr. St. Laurent indicated the government felt it could rely on certain provisions of the Criminal Code and the Official Secrets Act. In the event of real or apprehended war, of course, he added, the government would have to reactivate the War Measures Act.

Naden Group Entertains At Hospital

An entertainment group from HMCS Naden visited Wilkinson Road Hospital and performed a two-hour variety program for the patients Friday night.

Arrangements for the show were made by Laverne M. Sands and the group was thanked by John C. McLeod, hospital official.

Show producer was A.B. Bob Gillespie and master of ceremonies was R.P.O. Harold Bingham.

Other members of the cast included A. Ryan, J. Ball, S. Way, R. Dunn, J. Woods and Specks Reiter.

Hundreds of Patients Once Dead Now Able To Lead Normal Lives

CHICAGO (NANA) — Hundreds of once "dead" persons are now living healthy, normal lives, thanks to modern medicine's new motto, "Never Say Dead."

Dr. Max Sadove of the University of Illinois School of Medicine cited many instances when fast-thinking doctors brought patients "back from the dead" by opening their chests and squeezing their hearts.

He urged doctors: "don't hesitate" to use this technique when a patient's heart stops.

Last February at Sudbury, Ont., a surgeon dashed from his dressing room into the room where his patient, an eight-year-old boy, had just "died" after a routine appendectomy. With no time for use of anything but his pocket knife, the doctor cut an eight-inch incision in the boy's chest, reached in and massaged the heart until the boy regained his life.

HUNDREDS REVIVED

Under the classic description of clinical death, "the cessation of all vital capacity," the halting of heart and respiratory action has been commonly viewed as the end of life. Under the strict limitations of this definition, it would appear that hundreds of persons have been "brought back to life."

Dr. Sadove, a student of these cases, gave numerous examples of the successful use of the heart-massage treatment.

An 11-year-old Salt Lake City boy apparently holds the record for being restored to life, when his physician last November massaged his heart for 28 minutes after it stopped during an operation to enlarge a heart valve. He was given 21 electrical shocks to start the organ again.

A close second is the case of a seven-year-old Asbury Park, N.J., boy who last December was "dead" for 27 minutes before heart massage revived him. He died 20 hours later, however.

A middle-aged heart patient "died" three times last October in Detroit's Receiving Hospital and was revived each time with the aid of a device which delivers shocks in the rhythm of the normal heart.

In emergencies the hand massage and pumping action keep blood flowing to the brain, Dr. Sadove said. He said the brain is frequently irreparably damaged if it is without oxygen for more than four minutes, even though other life in the body may be restored.

In view of the need for speed, Dr. Sadove suggests ignoring the conventional and traditional tests for death until emergency measures which might revive life are exhausted.

Although ability to tell whether a patient is dead or alive may seem rudimentary for a physician, medical schools have long recognized that this may be the most crucial decision that confronts the young doctor. It is described as more difficult today than ever before.

Three dramatic instances of persons being erroneously considered dead have been reported in the past year.

An 80-year-old Brooklyn man startled the embalmer by batting his eyes and sighing, many hours after he had been pronounced dead. He was wrapped in a blanket and rushed to a hospital. An experienced physician, who had been visiting him twice daily for weeks, had given final tests for 35 minutes before deciding he was dead.

At Atlanta, an elderly woman after lying for 17 hours in the morgue, raised her arm to shield her eyes from the light. The apprentice undertaker said: "This woman isn't dead." She answered: "No, I am not dead. Where am I?"

Khalil Krishan, 40, an Arab in Jerusalem, was handed to his family for burial by hospital authorities. Ten hours later, while he was being washed with hot water in keeping with Moslem tradition, the cold water was accidentally turned on. Krishan opened his eyes and asked: "Who is washing me with cold water?"

The last-ditch defense against death on the operating table is regarded as particularly important, because modern methods of radical surgery apparently increase the danger of heart stopping. Dr. Jack L. Eisaman of Bluffton, Ind., has completed studies showing it may be expected in one out of 5,000 cases today, as compared with one out of 10,000 formerly. Dr. Max Sadove believes the possibility should be calculated as high as one out of every 1,000 cases.

Memorial Day Observance

U.S. Honors Heroic Dead

By The Associated Press

The United States honors its heroic dead today with prayers as its sons never again will be called to war. But world peace remained uneasy.

Since last Memorial Day, a truce had come in Korea, yet guns still spurted in Indo-China. A question facing all Americans was whether this fighting would erupt into another Korea, or worse.

Adm. Robert B. Carney, chief of naval operations said only last week that the free world faces "graver" alternatives in Indo-China than those that led to the Korean fighting.

CARRIER TRAGEDY

Memorial Day was made poignant this year by the death of some 100 men in an explosion aboard the aircraft carrier Bennington only a few days before.

President Eisenhower, in a Memorial Day proclamation said:

"We should keep faith with our heroic dead by humbly and devoutly supplicating Almighty God for guidance in our efforts to achieve a peaceful world."

The president, who will lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier today at Arlington National Cemetery, called for "amity among nations."

The first 30 hours of the long week end took 132 lives, including 111 in traffic accidents, 10 by drowning and 11 from various other causes.

That count, which started at 6 p.m. Friday was up through 10 p.m. Saturday.

Jaycees Win Convention For Victoria Next Year

The 1955 convention of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, regional British Columbia and Yukon district, will be held in Victoria.

Local Jaycees, attending the convention at Penticton, won out in their bid for the convention yesterday, but lost in their bid to make Don Smith of Victoria regional president.

They still have high hopes of winning the award given each year for the most colorful unit at the convention. They went to the convention in a chartered bus, covered with banners and signs and equipped with special signs and horns. They had plenty of gimmicks planned to present at the convention.

Flood Danger Not Ended

VANCOUVER (CP)—Much of the winter snow pack is still in British Columbia's mountains, and the danger of damaging floods has not yet passed. But officials report that continuing cool weather, which has slowed the runoff considerably during the past week, is steadily lessening the danger.

Water resources branch officials said Saturday that 10 days of good hot weather might still bring some difficulties.

Meanwhile, both the Columbia and Fraser rivers have dropped in their higher reaches. The level of the Columbia at Revelstoke Saturday was 22.35 feet, down nearly eight inches from Friday. The Fraser level showed a drop of nine inches at Prince George during the past 24 hours with a level of 24.41 feet today.

Trail reported a three-inch climb in the Columbia there at 34.70 feet, while the Fraser showed a nine inch increase at 15.00 feet at Mission, and a five-inch jump at Hope at 24.74 feet.

Fire Wrecks Garrison Club

QUEBEC (CP)—More than 100 firemen battled flames raging in Quebec's historic garrison club early yesterday.

Fire broke out shortly after midnight in the stone two-story structure on Rue St. Louis, near the citadel and quickly spread through the richly panelled interior.

Many historic souvenirs were kept in the grey building. Members of the club include Prime Minister St. Laurent.

The club originally housed the British Royal Engineer at the time England kept a garrison in the citadel. It now is Quebec's most exclusive social club.

No one was reported injured in the blaze.

Saturday Toll High In Plane Crashes

EARLTON, Ont. (CP)—Saturday was a bad day for air crash fatalities in Canada and the United States.

Two Ohio fishermen died when their light plane crashed shortly after take-off in heavy mist over the airport at Earlton. They were Charles Seigler, about 37, of Canton, Ohio, and A. M. Gremmiger, about 30, of Louisville. Earlton is 25 miles south of the gold-producing camp of Kirkland Lake.

The crash of a B-25 bomber about one mile northeast of the Fall River, Massachusetts, airport, killed one crew member and injured three others. It is believed an engine conked out. The plane did not catch fire when it crash-landed in the woods.

The crash of a helicopter three miles from the Sept Isles, Quebec, airport killed an Ottawa man and injured another. The dead man was identified as Alvin Moorehouse Dunphy of Ottawa, the injured man as Ray J. Lett.

The men were doing survey work for the federal mines and natural resources department when the accident occurred. An inquest will be held.

Thirty-two-year-old Flying Officer Ian C. Thomson of Winnipeg survived the crash of his RCAF Mustang at the RCAF station at Portage La Prairie, Man. Thomson walked away from the flame-enveloped plane unaided.

Blue-uniformed patrolmen of the B.C. Automobile Association are once again traveling the Island Highway and other parts of the province lending a hand to motorists in trouble.

The patrolmen, whose services are free, will also patrol highways from New Westminster to Blaine, Washington, and from New Westminster to Princeton.

$20,000,000 Price Tag Pre-Set on House Fires

An estimated 44,000 residential fires across the country will cost Canadians upwards of $20,000,000 this year, according to the All Canada Insurance Federation.

Warning that every home can turn into a potential fire trap, officials said that a thorough check for fire hazards should go hand-in-hand with spring cleaning.

According to insurance experts, the greatest hazard in any home is electric wiring.

They advised householders to call in an expert electrician to have all wiring and circuits checked for damage or overloading.

Other recommended fire precautions are:

Inflamable heating and cleaning fluids should be stored in plainly marked safety-cans. Oily rags or clothing soaked with furniture polish, wax or paint, should either be cleaned or destroyed.

the cost of medical care

That the cost of medical care has risen, no one can deny. But the rise has not been out of proportion to the general advance in the cost of living. At the same time the quality of medical service has been immeasurably improved.

Consider that today your physician has invested from eight to ten years and about ten thousand dollars in his education alone. He has no chance to earn until he is twenty-six or twenty-seven years old. He must have an office in a good neighborhood, good equipment, a car, good clothes.

Pharmacy, too, has stepped up its standards. Almost every state now requires four years of college and a year or two of practice before registration. All this adds up to better medical service for you.

Island Roads Program

VANCOUVER ISLAND has been starved of adequate road development for so long that it comes almost as a shock when a government in office suggests that it is proposed to do something about the matter. Of promises the Island in five decades has had its fill. Premier Bennett's speech at Port Alberni last week, giving the attention it did to Island roads and Island development generally, seems to suggest that the present regime has in mind a better deal for Vancouver Island. That would be very welcome. There are few areas in British Columbia where a little and not difficult road construction could give a faster or more profitable return to the economy of the province.

When one considers that a population of approximately 250,000 is established on the Island it is easy to see what adequate road connection means to them in their daily lives. The Island Highway has been long in existence as a backbone road on Vancouver Island. From it laterals can, and one day surely must, be taken to join important Island communities, and give them access to the national road system. One such new link south of the Alberni Canal in the Port Renfrew area, and another north of it near the Campbell River watershed would open economically important areas.

There are literally a dozen places where short, valley roads would bring isolated communities into touch for the first time in half a century. The premier mentioned the Tofino link. The east road is well advanced and in good position. The west coast road is still in embryo. Cross, lateral roads are few, and loop development is virtually non-existent. So there is every possible scope for a clear-cut and vigorous road program on Vancouver Island. It would repay the taxpayers' investment many times over.

Strange Reasoning

THE subject of a separate coast guard service, so vital to B.C. shipping, came up again in the House of Commons last week, albeit it didn't get very far. Another plea for its establishment was voiced by Mr. Colin Cameron, member for Nanaimo, who put forth the view long held in coastal areas here that the present air-sea rescue agencies, good as they are, are not the adequate safeguard that a coast guard service would be. In reply the transport minister said no such force is planned. So that was that.

Mr. Chevrier's argument in rebuttal is intriguing. He recalled a government study of three years ago which set the cost of a coast guard organization at $9,000,000 initially, plus about $3,000,000 a year to keep it going. Far from being a deterrent if this is all a coast guard service would cost it might well be launched tomorrow. In a national budget of nearly five billions yearly a continuing cost of three millions is almost a mere detail.

Elsewhere the government is not deterred by expenditure. In Washington it is spending a cool two million or more for a building to house its liaison defense mission there. Another five million or so will be swallowed up in a new film board building in Montreal. Large sums are spent continuously to promote the publication of all kinds of printed pamphlets, dealing for example with such recondite subject as the love life of goldfish. There is the little matter of free franking, which deprives the postal department and therefore the taxpayer of more than four millions annually, much of it to mail material which rapidly goes into recipients' waste-paper baskets.

When set against these wasteful habits refusal to establish a coast guard service on the grounds of expense does not carry with it much validity. It indicates a woeful lack of perspective, as has unfortunately been far too apparent in this matter for a long time.

Fly Ash Nuisance Returns

NOW that the wind has moved around to the west and southwest, which will be the prevailing winds for the next few months, it has become obvious that Victoria's smoke nuisance has not been appreciably abated. The murky pall is back again. Viewed from high ground at a distance this dirty grey cloud can be seen to hang over the city and part of the suburbs, with clear air surrounding it, so that the loss of sunlight and pollution of the air cannot be blamed on fog wafted in from the straits.

Areas to leeward of the industrial centre suffer most, a fact which offers further proof that that is where the trouble originates. Oil and coal burning installations contribute to the general smoke haze, but they are not the cause of the fly ash which rains down on the business and residential districts to the north and east of the industrial area. One does not need to be a trained analyst to determine what this filthy shower is composed of and where it comes from. It is wood ash blown from the burners consuming mill waste.

When the breeze falls light this ash in clearly distinguishable flakes and particles can be seen falling over a wide area. It gets into the eyes, causing painful irritation. It fills nooks and crannies and drifts through every crack, so that only a building hermetically sealed can keep it out. It accumulates in dirty drifts inches deep in the gutters, to be set in swirling motion again as soon as a breeze springs up.

While it may not be possible to eliminate fly ash altogether, the nuisance can be substantially reduced. That was demonstrated some time ago when the City put on an anti-smoke drive. Modification of equipment and improvement of burning practices at the instance of the smoke inspector brought in time a noticeable abatement. It looks, however, as if the chief offenders have become careless again.

Shipping Problem

. . . It is self-evident that shipbuilding and ship-repairing industry is an indispensable element of national security. That Canada's merchant marine should be smaller than that of land-locked Switzerland should make us, as the world's third trading nation, hang our heads in shame. As those know who regularly watch lumber shipments from our district ports, it is a red-letter day when a Canadian ships calls. This is not really surprising as there are only 30 vessels to carry our tremendous overseas trade!

True, our operating and maintenance costs bar us from competing with foreign and Commonwealth shipbuilding nations. This is not the whole story, however. Part of it, and an important part, is to be found in a 1931 agreement. Under it, ships of U.K. registry are free to trade in Canada's coastal waters. Should consideration not be given to amending this to ensure that such ships be built and maintained in Canada? . . .

—COWICHAN LEADER

Realistic and Practical

The city council is to be congratulated on its attitude and its actions in regard to the local refuse disposal problem. The new system of controlled public use of the city dump is a practical and realistic answer to a serious and perplexing problem . . .

The council is also to be congratulated on its decision to open the dump to all persons who purchase a permit and observe the regulations. Residents living outside the pick-up area must dispose of their garbage some place and it is in the interests of the city of Ladysmith that it should not be dumped indiscriminately along the highways leading to the city. Some side roads visible from the highway are already littered with an unsightly mess of tin cans and refuse. By making the city dump available at a nominal charge, any slight excuse there may have been for this litter has been removed.

All the Facts

. . . The Review feels that what happens in Alberta and Saskatchewan and Ontario doesn't affect the issue here a tittle. We have said before and now repeat that our present government here in British Columbia should have our support, for only in that way can it function properly. But if Mr. Murphy (Noe) Murphy, president of the Social Credit League), insists on singing the praises of the Alberta government, he should also make it clear that Alberta's enviable position with regard to provincial debt has been attained by loading a debt of well over $150,000,000 onto the municipalities. He should make it clear that Alberta repudiated her bonds in 1936-37, forcing many people of modest means to sell their bonds for half what they paid for them.

Happy Day

Another successful Empire Day celebration in the Albernis has come and gone with children and adults alike enjoying a program of which we can all be proud.

The Elks, with help from the Order of the Royal Purple, took on, as usual, the huge task of co-ordinating and promoting the show from start to finish.

Year after year we look forward to the color and pageantry of the festivities as a break in the humdrum affairs of everyday living. Each year they leave memories of a joyous time, of bands playing and flags flying, of youngsters happy with their ice cream cones (never so good as when they're free), of a lovely young May Queen and her retinue.

Once again let's thank the Elks for a thoroughly good time on the Twenty-Fourth of May.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

HAVING been privileged to comment on the Glasgow Rangers elsewhere in this paper I shall not pursue the theme here, except in relation to a by-product on view at Athletic Park last week and its connotations.

The by-product was personified by the little fellows of six to nine who displayed their incipient skills during the half-time period. One should not expect much from boys of such tender age, but their attempts to fashion football along classic lines were highly creditable.

I was particularly struck by the tuition that inhibited them from kicking a ball higher than the knee and limited a pass to 30 feet, for here is what seems to be a basic element of the current phenomenal form of European Continental teams — a close-passing game raised to absolute perfection.

These small Victorian boys are thus on the correct soccer path.

The truth seems to be that a new art is being forged on the playing field, and one whose implications transcend the mere matter of a game. Soccer is now a universal pastime of high political significance; it has become a symbol of national prestige and attainment.

Last Sunday in Budapest a great Hungary eleven humbled England by the score of 7-1. A million people tried to see the match, so tremendous was the interest. I thought I'd quote some extracts from the London Times correspondent's account of the game.

They are illuminating.

"The question now is sharp and clear. What is English football to do? The first hard fact to digest, if one can even swallow it, is that we are no longer a major world power in the game. We must reshape our whole outlook.

"This, no doubt, is neither the time nor the place for a theoretical discussion, but as one of the England players remarked after the cruel execution was over, 'I have never seen anything like it. They were men from another planet.' One remembers clearly writing almost those very same words about the will-o'-the-wisp Hungarians in their maroon shirts when they exposed the bankruptcy of our football six months ago.

"Still, for all the cruel trend of events, here was football one could sit and watch until old age finally overcame one. Here was a cultural expression, a game which, even if it was not on this occasion hurtling with sharp conflict, was yet passionate and beautiful in its art. The Hungarian attack, in all its imaginative conception, was like light passing through a prism. It had all the colors of the rainbow and constantly the combinations of those colors were changed.

"It all seemed so easy, looking down upon the pattern from the steep side of this breath-taking stadium. But no doubt it is very different being an Englishman in a white shirt down in the heart of that rich green battlefield where the blazing sun cast its lengthening shadows. The English side straining every sinew and fighting to the last breath, were simply outclassed. There is no other word to use. As a team they were outpaced, outmanoeuvred and outthought. Defense, as one has seen before, was drawn into the most grotesque shapes by the fiendishly clever decoy work of a superbly swift Hungarian team.

"Once more one saw that these Hungarians have probably achieved at this point of time as great a mastery over a football as any team in history, based upon quintessence of controlled speed and quick thinking.

"As the score mounted so too did the appetites of the huge crowd over 90,000 strong. Triumphantly and with a pounding beat the roar smote the heavens ra-ra-hajra. How they loved this banquet! And what a feast, attended by representatives from over 20 nations, to remember and digest."

At least such English prose matches in artistry the Hungarian skill it describes.

Australia Stakes Antarctica

By THOMAS R. HENRY

Science Editor, North American Newspaper Alliance

THE first permanent settlement in some 3,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface has been set up near the coast of MacRobertson Land on the Antarctic Continent by a group of 10 Australian explorers.

The major announced purpose of this little camp, named "Mawson" after Australia's foremost south polar explorer, is to establish beyond dispute the Commonwealth's claim to the vast area that includes half the Antarctic Continent. Comprising all the land between the Wilkes, Enderby, MacRobertson and Princess Elizabeth coasts and the South Pole, this region is marked on older maps as Enderby Land and for more than a century was claimed by the United Kingdom.

In 1933 it was formally incorporated into the Australian Commonwealth by acts of the British and Australian Parliaments.

Under present international conventions not, however, entirely recognized by the United States — territorial claims to unoccupied areas rest on three grounds: discovery, exploration and occupation. It is the latter requirement which Australia now is trying to fulfill by the Mawson settlement.

Decision to set up the camp came with the destruction by fire a year ago of a French settlement, intended to be permanent, on the coast of Adelie Land. This is a small pie-shaped slice extending from the coast to the Pole which essentially bisects the Australian territory. The present party is accompanied by a French observer.

Besides supporting the territorial claim, the Australians will carry out much exploration of unknown territory and make meteorological and other scientific observations. It now is recognized that much of the Southern Hemisphere's weather is created on the great southern ice cap from which hurricane winds constantly blow northward. The expedition is equipped with "weasels," tractored snow vehicles developed during the war which have hauled the specially-designed Australian caravans inland from the MacRobertson coast.

Advantage is being taken of the experience of the New Zealand Sir Edmund Hillary, a member of the party that recently made the first successful ascent of Mount Everest. The explorers are wearing the type of quilted, down-filled nylon jackets designed by Hillary and also are using much of his mountain-climbing gear, which may prove invaluable in the rough, deeply-crevassed ice.

The party is under the command of Dr. Robert Dovers, Australian physicist. The same men will remain for at least a year at the station. Then Australia plans to replace them, after the pattern set by the French in Adelie Land.

The territory is almost completely unexplored. In the 1911 and 1913 expeditions of Sir Douglas Mawson, however, very rich coal deposits were found in the mountains of MacRobertson and Princess Elizabeth Lands. Mixed with the rather low-grade coal were considerable traces of gold, silver, copper, antimony and molybdenue. It is believed that the land under the ice is of much the same geological structure as Southern Australia. The two continents may have been joined in the distant past.

For several years the Australians have maintained two Antarctic weather stations on Hoard and Macquerie Islands, off the Antarctic coast about 3,000 miles apart. Most of the men at the new continental station have had experience at these island outposts.

The present party was taken ashore from the Danish ship Kista Dan, chartered by the Australian government for the purpose. It sailed from the French possession of Kerguelen Land in the sub-Antarctic late in February.

It is planned that all three Australian stations will take part in the international program of 1957-58 when, if present programs are realized, the United States will establish an observing station at the South Pole itself.

The vast area over which Australia is seeking to establish its sovereignty beyond dispute is, so far as known from a few airplane flights over it, a completely barren waste. There never have been conflicting claims to ownership such as have disturbed international relations in other parts of Antarctica.

Slippery Subject

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

THE "sea serpent" legend will not down—for long. Like accounts of "flying saucers," reports of sightings of the long, undulating, elusive creatures range from Loch Ness in Scotland to the seven seas. Dr. Maurice Burton of the British Museum of Natural History has been listening to such stories, he says, for 30 years, and has come to the conclusion that there may just possibly be something to them.

After eliminating hoaxes and optical illusions, he finds that the number of believers in sea serpents is more than might be supposed and that there is a certain consistency in their reports. These "generally refer to a beast of considerable length, moving swiftly, remaining on the surface for short periods, and with a series of humps above the waterline as its most distinctive feature."

This description leads him to believe that the "serpent" may be a variety of eel longer than has yet been captured. Dredgers have taken eel larvae three feet long or longer. If these should grow proportionally to the three-inch larvae of the freshwater eel, they would attain a length of over 36 feet.

Persons who have seen the fascinating recent motion picture "The Sea Around Us" can credit a theory that the earth's water areas may hold creatures not yet known to man. But as for eels being sea serpents or vice versa, that remains a slippery subject.

Elections, Big and Small

THE voters of Britain swept Stanley Baldwin's Conservative government out of office, but gave no party a governing majority. Labor swept the industrial Midlands and North to pile up 287 seats. Clinging stubbornly to their safe rural seats, Conservatives elected 251.

It was the end of May, 1929—25 years ago.

Liberals had 52; Nationalists, 3; "Prohibitionist," 1; Independents, 3. The Labor Party had gained 122 seats. Nobody yet knew what alliance of parties would form the government of Great Britain, or who would be the leader.

Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, was greeted by a tremendous crowd at Kings Cross railway station when he arrived in London from Durham.

Before the election, former prime minister Lloyd George had predicted that Labor would win.

Robert Baird, grand master of the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of British Columbia, officiated at the laying of the corner stone of the new Shrine Temple on View Street in Victoria.

A $400,000 fire swept through the Rialto Building in downtown Seattle.

In Edinburgh, the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church of Scotland agreed to merge, ending 20 years of negotiations.

No. 1 Pithead and adjoining buildings at Nanaimo had been destroyed by fire, with a loss of some $100,000. It was Nanaimo's second disastrous fire in two weeks.

The date was May 31, 1904—50 years ago.

"We think the management of the local baseball club has made a serious mistake in undertaking Sunday ball games," The Colonist observed editorially.

"There is a small portion . . . of the wage earners of the city which may find some difficulty in attending games on week days, but this is no good reason why the sensibilities of the vast majority should be outraged by the introduction of such a notoriously professional game as baseball on Sunday."

In the Russo-Japanese war, the Japanese had swept the Russians from Kinchou and stormed an almost impregnable Russian position on Nanshan Hill.

Nanaimo had just concluded a unique election. John George Barnston was elected to represent Nanaimo in the colonial House of Assembly. It was a unanimous choice. Only one man voted. He was the only one entitled to vote. This was the end of May, 1859—just 95 years ago.

The lone voter in Nanaimo's one-man election was Captain Charles E. Stuart. He was the only person present at the outdoor election meeting who had the needed property qualifications.

Returning Officer Elfred R. Benson declared Barnston legally elected.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

ONE thing the American public thinkers are worrying over recently is the effect of Senate enquiries on the confidence people should all have in their fellow man. Without confidence in one another, they ask, what happens to our society? The McCarthy shindy is supposed to have undermined that mutual confidence.

All you have to do to reassure yourself in this matter is to go for a drive in your car. Surely the spectacle of thousands of us whistling through the crowded city streets at 30, 40 miles an hour, in perfect faith in all our fellow mortals in cars, is the greatest possible testimony to mutual confidence. On highways, these week-ends, tens of thousands of us rush serenely along at 50, 60 miles an hour, in close company not only with our fellow mortals immediately in front of and behind us, but with less than five feet separating us from the opposing stream of traffic racing the opposite direction.

Despite the accidents which, every day and perhaps every hour of every day, should serve as a check on our mutual confidence, we none the less, without a thought or even a reservation, still plunge into the fabulous flow of traffic, take our places skilfully, and there hurtle along, half a ton of machinery in our hands, with enough speed, weight and momentum to kill us deader than tirks if our confidence in ten thousand others is not fully justified.

In some particulars, we may lack confidence in our fellow man. In money matters, for example, we are usually very cagey and suspicious. To lend or borrow a hundred dollars, to buy or sell a house, to choose the man from whom we will buy a refrigerator, we will narrow our eyes, and pause to consider every aspect of the deal.

But as far as our lives are concerned, to heck with it. We trust everybody.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

"I'm afraid, doctor," said Mrs. Brown, "that my husband has some terrible mental affliction. Sometimes I talk to him for hours and then discover that he hasn't heard a word."

"That isn't an affliction, madam," was the weary reply. "That's a gift."

The professor's pride and joy was his library. The shelves were packed with an impressive array of volumes of all sizes.

"Man," remarked a friend in an awed voice, "but you must do an awful lot of reading."

"Actually," commented the sevant, "I don't have time for much reading because of my preoccupation with scientific experiments, but I keep on buying books for the time when I retire."

"And when will that be?" asked his friend.

"I don't know," replied the professor. "You see, I could have retired years ago if I hadn't spent so much on books."

Letters to the Editor

Agent-General

I was extremely interested to read the recent letter from Mr. Cummings of the Midland Bank concerning Mr. McAdam, B.C.'s agent-general in London. The gentleman is perfectly right; Mr. McAdam has done a wonderful job and his place is going to be more than hard to fill.

Might I offer in all humility a humble suggestion? By all means keep Mr. McAdam in his post for another two or three years but in the meantime appoint a successor to work and study under this brilliant agent-general at B.C. House.

I had the privilege of a long talk with the agent-general when taken to call at B.C. House by my relative, Admiral Sir Arthur Bromley. I also had the honor of a visit to the Hon. Norman Robertson, Canada's high commissioner, during my recent visit to England. Both these gentlemen stressed the fact that whoever was appointed, those in England "had to live with them"; therefore it was natural to hope that the man appointed would be congenially adaptable to the English way of life.

A combination of knowledge of present-day life in B.C. and the possession of worthwhile contacts (or at least the ability to make them) in the United Kingdom is a most useful prerequisite to this very important diplomatic position. The eyes of the world will be upon this man, his private life, his social graces, and the way he "boosts the province in all his dealings"; in fact he will be British Columbia in London just as Mr. McAdam has been for so many successful years.

The job under such a teacher would be an interesting one, but it would be a job where diplomacy and adaptability are needed. An unfortunate appointment of a man not suited to dealing with the British and foreign contacts to be met with in his daily work would greatly harm British Columbia's prestige abroad. The position calls for a man of the world and cannot possibly be filled by some callow youth.

It has been said, and I have upheld the fact abroad, that Premier Bennett has not yet made a bad appointment, so let us hope that this very important position finds a true British Columbian worthy of upholding the splendid world-wide esteem in which this province is held today, and helping to perpetuate its considerable and honorable tradition in the past.

School Costs

Being a parent with several children, the subject of new schools and additions to old schools is of special interest to me. As a taxpayer, with property both in the North Saanich area and at Brentwood, I am even more vitally concerned.

I heartily agree with the members of the school board and their statements that we need new schools and additions to old ones, but their estimates of the costs of these additions and new construction fill me with amazement and apprehension.

On what basis do they arrive at these astronomical figures for such things as additions, let alone new buildings? Far too little information has been given to us, the taxpayer, as to the cost and how it is estimated.

I feel that the cost and all purposely been kept in the backpurposely kept in he background, and our feelings played on with regard to the plight of the poor, over-crowded student, so that we will blindly vote "yes" without proper appreciation that by so doing we are endorsing a policy of extravagance and heaven knows what at our expense. Once the board has our permission to go ahead who knows where it will lead?

Too many people when working for the government feel that no sum is too great to ask. Until the board can show that these estimates are based on an honest and fair evaluation of the cost of the work needed Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, you had better vote "No."

As far as the PTA is concerned this whole business is plain politics and completely out of our line of endeavor. We are just being used by the school board to further their objects and the PTA had better leave the whole thing alone. Individual members can do what they like personally, but any action taken should not be done in the name of the PTA.

Foster Homes

The subject of foster homes is generally understood, but by many people is considered an abstract problem, bearing little relation to themselves. Our Agency, like any which cares for children, stoutly defends the opinion that for a child there is no better place than a family. Nothing can replace the affection and strengths which lie in a family. This is, if anything, more true for other people's children—for foster children—than it is for children who [illegible] safe in their own homes.

When agencies like ours appeal for foster homes, there rises in the minds of potential foster parents an image of a delightful little boy or girl playing happily around the home. For that reason we have not, on the whole, very great difficulty in finding homes for such children. I would like to appeal through you, sir, for people in Greater Victoria to consider themselves as potential foster-parents for teen-agers.

As soon as that is said, I know there will be many thoughts of the difficulties that one may run into with teen-agers; one thinks of problems of discipline, of sex education, of possible delinquency. It is true that the teen-ager appears in the eyes of many adults to be a mystery. Perhaps this is because adults find it hard to conceive of a class of humans who are at the same time both children and adults. Yet this is the teen-ager, and for those who can see it in this way, this period of life is an unfolding in the adolescent of great potentialities. The adolescent is at last prepared to learn how to be an adult. It is up to the foster parents, then, to help the adolescent secure the foundations of his personality, to help him answer and surmount the doubts of childhood, and to look forward with happiness to being a mature person.

This is the job we are asking of the families of Greater Victoria. More than anything else at the present time, we need foster homes for teen-age boys and girls. We are not asking foster parents to make a financial contribution—the Family and Children's Service pays for all costs involved.

Anyone who is interested should telephone Mrs. R. Hamilton at the Family and Children's Service, 2-5121. Our need for these homes is very urgent.

A Padre in Print

Rev. William Hills scoffs at the idea of the throne of England being occupied by a descendant of King David of Israel. If this is not the identical throne and occupant, then, may I ask of him, where does the kingdom of David flourish today? If he is a believer in God's promises, he must admit that it is at present in existence, only waiting to be taken over by the Greater David.

God made a very definite promise to David that his kingdom and seed should endure forever (see Psalm 89: 3-4). "I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn unto David My servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." This promise under God's oath, was reconfirmed in 2 Cor. 13:5, Gen. 49:10 and 2 Sam. 12. The question is, does Rev. William Hills believe in God's Word, or does he connect the Creator with broken promises made under oath?

The Gallows

In reference to the present federal inquiry into corporal and capital punishment: it was my duty as a newspaper reporter many years ago to see three men hanged in a row in New Westminster gaol. I thought the spectacle so revolting and barbarous that I have been against capital punishment ever since. It looked like a reversal to Tyburn tree and the horrible death scenes of the Middle Ages; nor do I think it does anything [illegible] deter the murderer than did the public hangings of earlier days. In fact it is a question whether the ghastly carpentry of the gallows, the black caps and dangling ropes are not likely to generate in the so minded a morbid emulation.

A few years ago I saw a graph showing the precentage of murders per capita in the different states of the Union. Strangely enough it appeared that in the seven states that had substituted imprisonment for murder the homicidal convictions were considerably lower than in any similar number of capital punishment states. It showed in the seven states mentioned that the average of murder convictions was 1.56 per 100,000 people. Of these Michigan, without capital punishment for over 100 years, had the highest average homicidal rate with conviction of 4.11 per 100,000, while Georgia, highest of the capital punishment states, ran to 23.04.

In fairness it must be added that life imprisonment is in force in a belt of northern states less susceptible to homocide than in states farther south, where the electric chair is chiefly used. These figures were shown for 1945 and of course there may have been a change since then.

It is, however, very doubtful whether public thinking in Canada is ripe for the abolition of capital punishment at this time. In view of that I would suggest that at least the gas chamber, or something like it, be substituted for hanging. It has quietness and privacy and is altogether a more decent and humane way of snuffing out human life. Nor would it be necessary to bring an executioner from one end of Canada to the other.

In the courts I think it would be an improvement if, as in the states, juries had the choice between verdicts of first and second degree murder.

City Employees

In reply to the decision of the outside city employees to continue their demands, I am reminded of the gentlemen farmers of Dorsetshire, England, who surely started something when they demanded their farm laborers should work unlimited hours for seven shillings a week (approximately $1.75), and if they protested, this would be reduced to six shillings a week, approximately $1.50. Their families hungry in the midst of the earth's abundant supply, caused the six men of Dorset to apply their idea of Christian justice. The result of their activities has snowballed into the tremendous "Juggernaut" one is witnessing today, less than 100 years later. Therefore, I would respectfully suggest that the Victoria City Council put a stop to its puny efforts to check the march of human greed and pay up.

On departure from San Francisco, Ontario and Sioux will continue on to San Diego, the frigates returning to their base in Esquimalt, arriving 9 a.m. June 11.

DUE BACK JUNE 16

HMCS Ontario and HMCS Sioux will spend June 8 to 12 in San Diego, arriving back in Esquimalt June 16 at 11 a.m.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Keith Dillabaugh

What is Pay-As-You-See television, you ask? Simply, it's a plan whereby viewers pay a fee, twenty-five cents to a dollar, say, to see special telecasts on their home sets. Several outfits, Zenith with its Phonevision, the Skiatron system, and the Telemeter system, have staged successful public demonstrations.

The Telemeter system, for example, calls for a coin-box attachment to the home set. When the proper amount of coin is jingled merrily into the box, the viewer can sit back and enjoy a championship sporting event or a world premier of a great picture on a channel specifically carrying the Telemeter programs. A tape-recorder within the coin-box keeps a record of the features watched and the money deposited.

The Pay-As-You-See angle could become whopping big business. Some experts believe it could eventually call for installation in over fifty million U.S. and Canadian homes, which would closely rival commercial network television.

Telemeters may rival commercial network television, but there isn't a place in Victoria that rivals DELTA ELECTRIC for Quality TV SETS and SERVICE! Won't you drop in at 714 Cormorant Street this week . . . you'll find we consistently give MORE VALUE for LESS MONEY. ***

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Not all the dead wood found, I regret to say, in the churches either grew in a tree or fell afoul of the champing mandibles of the death-watch beetle.

When I first came upon T. S. Eliot's "The Hollow Men" during my freshman days at 'varsity, I thought he was laying it on a bit.

But now a measure of objective criticism seasoned with a dash of cynicism will go far to rescue the Christian world from giving way to an easy and superficial optimism about the present and the future.

It is trite to say that our world stands at yet another cross-roads where a decision taken can lead us to war or, refused, can keep us in an uneasy peace or something worse.

As a matter of fact, I notice that last week's quadrennial conference of Seventh-Day Adventists in San Francisco was thought by many of the delegates to be the last due to the imminent end of the world."

Are we indeed, as Eliot says, "the hollow men . . . the stuffed men . . . leaning together" and will the end of the world come —when it comes—"not with a bang but a whimper?"

So many of us accept the proposition that the chief enemy of Christianity and hence, of our civilization, is Communism.

Now is this really true?

Atheistic Communism does indeed challenge the very existence of the Christian Church.

There can be no peace between Christ and the Kremlin, any more than there can be a compromise between the true and the false.

But the Christian world would not be jittery about Communism if it was as faithful and true to Christ as its name implies.

Nominalism in religion stands as a greater danger to the Western democracies than Communism does in politics.

So many Christians are that in name only.

This is not, I'm sorry to say, guesswork. Knock on the door in any community hereabouts, and you will find that while nearly all claim to be this or that in religion, only a minority have an active and definite part in a church program.

They remind me of an answer I got one summer in 1935, when I was a student pastor in a Haliburton parish in Ontario.

"Oh, yes," said this good man, "I'm an Anglican, but I don't work at it!"

How many of those whose voices are raised in defense of Christian civilization against the subversion of Communism are actively engaged in supporting the work of the church of their conscience's choice?

How many of them, on the other hand, have merely been hatched, matched and hope to be dispatched in the bosom of a Christian communion?

These are the questions which must be faced by our generation.

Communism is a world religion. I hold it to be an evil thing. But it will not be defeated by straw-men or hollow men, even if a certificate of baptism flutters around their necks.

Until and unless the members of the Christian community match their devotion, loyalty, and faithfulness to their cause with that of the disciples of Marx, Lenin and Malenkov, we shall not draw an easy breath.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Triplet girls, each weighing less than two pounds, were in oxygen tents at Rochester General Hospital Saturday after a 75-mile ambulance dash from the Sampson air force base hospital, where they were born. The girls, born Friday to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Yames, were brought here for specialized care at the hospital's premature baby centre.

Civil Defense in Victoria Based on H-Bomb Threat

All Greater Victoria civil defense plans are being modified to meet hydrogen bomb war threats, co-ordinator L. G. Hatcher said yesterday.

An instance of this is that the H-bomb plans call for dispersal of fire equipment in an area from five to 11 miles from the city.

But the former atom-bomb plans were to disperse the equipment at various areas three miles from the city.

VITAL INFORMATION

Mr. Hatcher said he hoped to obtain vital defense information concerning the H-bomb from a conference he will attend in Ottawa, July 19. The conference is designated for target area directors, he said.

Some ideas of greater elasticity in defense schemes will be tried June 14, in Victoria's participation in Exercise Alert, which will be nation-wide.

From a downtown area bounded by Government, Wharf, Yates and Fort streets, "casualties" will be evacuated.

They will leave the area in a craft supplied by the Royal Canadian Navy to View Royal, landing at the former Westing house building, a permanent district control headquarters.

LANGFORD CENTRE

Buses will transport the evacuees to a Langford welfare centre, one or two to be fully set up for the exercise. The second will be in the Seventh Day Adventist School, Hillside Avenue.

It was also learned that a full-time civil defense director will be appointed at HMC Dockyard. Applications for the job are expected to be considered next week.

Dockyard workers now are receiving defense-training during working hours, under P. L. Sampson, a Victoria area instructor.

Unions Win Bargaining Certificates

Two certificates of bargaining authority have been issued automotive workers' unions on Vancouver Island, the Labor Relations Board reports.

The B.C. Auto Workers, Lodge 1857, has been certified for employees, except office staff and outside salesmen, of Nib Johnston Motors Ltd. at Courtenay.

Bonner Raps Tax on Land

COURTENAY—George E. Bonner, president of the newly-formed B.C. Federation of Ratepayers, says school taxation on land is outmoded and unjust and must be taken off all the land.

He told the Comox District Ratepayers' Association Friday night, "It is the aim of the ratepayers to do away with this tax, and in order that this may be done we need a stronger body, such as a B.C. Federation of Ratepayers."

He said a tentative B.C. association was formed using the Vancouver Island ratepayers' constitution.

Premier Bennett's hints this week that a West Coast road from the Albernis to Tofino may soon be a reality has renewed hopes of a new ocean playground for Vancouver Island which, if connected to Strathcona Park could become Canada's most popular playground. Skiing, mountain climbing, glaciers, lake fishing, pink snow, beautiful vistas, coupled with rugged ocean beauties of Vancouver Island's West Coast, all in one park, would be hard to beat. Top picture was taken from Clayoquot, an island which overlooks Tofino. Pictured at right is Long Beach where 12 miles of hard-packed sand are pounded by the never-ceasing surf. ## Dr. Chisholm Declares

World Peace Hopes Rest on UN Success

PORT ALBERNI—What hope there is for world peace lies in the United Nations and its specialized agencies, Dr. Brock Chisholm, leading Canadian physiologist and former director general of the World Health Organization told his audience at a meeting of the Vancouver Island Registered Nurses' Association here.

He pointed out to the gathering of members from the six Island chapters that they have a direct voice in WHO through the Canadian Nurses' Association and the International Council of Nurses.

Dr. Chisholm explained briefly the purpose behind each of the agencies which are set up "under the umbrella' of the up "under the umbrella" of the ently and all, excepting the UN international children's organization, supported by assessment on member nations.

MANY MEMBERS

Membership varies from 20 to universality, he said, with the

DR. BROCK CHISHOLM

World Health Organization having more than 80 member nations.

The speaker pointed out how, though each is an independent agency, they are all more or less involved with each other. It is found quite simple for employees of different agencies to work for and with each other, he said.

The World Health Organization is prepared to assist any government to take the next step in its health program. Workers with the organization must have a high degree of maturity of personality, which, because they will be dealing, perhaps, with people of culture, religion and way of life widely differing from their own, is more important than a high degree of technical knowledge.

CANADIANS VALUED

The fact that there is less political implication in Canadian participation in the movement has made the Canadian worker particularly valuable in WHO and there are many nurses from this country taking part in the work.

The organization can give assistance in every aspect of health work, borrowing people from anywhere for loan to governments while people of those countries learn techniques and to take responsibility.

He explained the importance of recognizing taboos and sacred things of the people in the various countries, and stated that it is futile to institute measures which would violate them.

A few of the services of the WHO which benefit Canada were mentioned by the speaker. He told of the standardization of all antibiotics for international traffic, of the international list of causes of disease and death, of the epidemology reportings service.

SERIOUS PEOPLE

Dr. Chisholm stated that the organization has in its employ competent, serious and devoted people who will work as effectively as they are supported.

He emphasized that in the interest of world peace it is highly desirable that people know about the WHO and the other UN agencies.

The speaker was introduced by Miss Gladys Skinner, public health nurse.

Mrs. Violet Tams, R.N., Courtenay, presided at a brief business meeting preceding the address.

Greeks Lose Vessels For Defrauding U.S.

WASHINGTON (UP)—Seven Greek-owned shipping firms have been ordered to forfeit 19 vessels and pay $4,110,000 in fines and settlements after pleading guilty to charges of defrauding the United States in a "get rich quick" surplus ship deal.

At the same time, a federal district court dismissed fraud charges against the corporation's owner, Greek shipping magnate Stavros Niarchos and 11 of his subordinates.

It left standing indictments against former Rep. Joseph E. Casey (D., Mass.), Julius C. Holmes, one-time U.S. Minister to London, and four others involved in the case.

The justice department asked for dismissal of the charges against Niarchos, contending he would never enter the United States as long as he faced criminal prosecution.

MAY GO BROKE

Justice Department Attorney Allen Kraus said the civil settlement "might well take these companies out of business."

Niarchos has been reported to control more than 1,200,000 tons of shipping—or more than one-sixth of the tanker tonnage under the U.S. flag.

He also is a brother-in-law of Aristotle Socrates Onassis, fabulously wealthy owner of the famed Monte Carlo casino. Onassis and Casey are under indictment in connection with another surplus tanker deal.

The justice department had brought both criminal and civil proceedings against the seven corporations, Niarchos and the others on charges of violating a law which bans the sale of U.S. surplus ships to aliens.

CONTROL GIVEN

It contended Casey gave Niarchos control of five surplus vessels when he sold Niarchos the American Overseas Tanker Corp.

The federal court fined the corporations a maximum $110,000. The corporations also agreed to a justice department stipulation to give up the 19 tankers and cargo ships and pay $4,000,000 in settling the civil action.

Fourteen of the ships already have been seized by the government. However, actual surrender of all 19 has been postponed for 90 days to give the Niarchos interests time to negotiate a possible alternative payment.

SHARE OF EARNINGS

The $4,000,000 covers a share of the ships' earnings during their operations by Niarchos' corporations. The firms paid $1,000,000 as a down payment Saturday.

The corporations pleading guilty were the North American Shipping & Trading Co., Inc.; Companla Internacional de Vapores, Ltd. of Panama; Plymouth Tanker Corp.; American Pacific Steamship Co.; Delaware Tanker Corp.; Oriental Tanker Corp., and the American Overseas Tanker Corp.

Rescuers Battle Blizzard

MT. McKINLEY PARK, Alaska (UP)—Two four-man rescue crews fought through a raging "summer blizzard" high on towering Mt. McKinley Saturday in an effort to reach a crippled young soldier before he starved to death.

"I think he is still alive," one of the rescuers radioed, "but help must come soon. He may have run out of food by now."

The radioed report said deep snow drifts and raging winds cut the rescuers' progress up the side of the western hemisphere's tallest mountain.

TINY TENT GOAL

Lakeshore Property Provided

PORT ALBERNI—The way was cleared for development of a recreation centre on the shore of Sproat Lake when a lease was signed this week giving the Sproat Lake Ratepayers Association use of seven acres of MacMillan and Bloedel-owned land.

Free use of the tract on Lakeshore Road for a period of 10 years with a provision for continuation of the lease, is contained in the agreement.

The association, headed by John Monrufet, sponsors and directs the annual Sproat Lake regatta.

FOUNDATIONS SET

Foundations have been completed on the lakeshore property for a 50 by 50-foot hall, and it is expected that construction up to the sub floor will be finished within three weeks.

Plans are to hold an outdoor dance on the floor on Saturday, July 17. The regatta will be held the following day with headquarters at Smith's Landing Park.

When the hall is completed it will have a 44 by 32-foot dance floor, stage and dressing rooms. Plans, drawn by Thor Peterson, include wide verandahs facing the lake. Other plans for the centre include the building of floats and boat landings, a parking lot and possibly a ball park.

Sproat Lake Ratepayers Association was organized over three years ago and last year sponsored the first annual regatta which was an outstanding success.

Modern Techniques Big Aid In Treating Severe Burns

The Colonist presents this column through the courtesy of the British Columbia Medical Association. Each contributor is an authority in the medical field discussed, but professional ethics dictate that he remain anonymous.

PLASTIC SURGERY (3)

Burns, whether caused by flame itself, by scalding fluids, by electrical currents or by any of a number of caustic agents, can wreak fearful havoc among human tissues. The modern treatment of burns may serve to illustrate how surgeons nowadays go about remedying damage to the body.

Burns range from simple reddening of the skin to severe damage to all layers of the skin and to the deeper tissues. In the latter variety the primary problem is to save the patient's life and this may require such devices as transfusion and the administration of oxygen.

The burned areas themselves are cleaned as rapidly and as gently as possible and are then usually wrapped in massive protective dressings. The dressings serve a number of purposes, but the two major objectives are the prevention of loss of the body's precious fluids and the barring of infection.

TISSUES STUDIED

Later—10 to 14 days later—these dressings are removed and the burned tissues are carefully examined. It is impossible immediately after burning to determine exactly what tissues will survive and what has been burned beyond recovery. But the distinction can be made readily at the end of 12 days.

The patient is carefully anaesthetized and all hopelessly damaged tissue is removed. The raw areas are immediately covered with skin grafts—usually from the undamaged areas of the patient's own body.

This skin is removed nowadays with dermatomes — machines of astonishing precision—that remove only the top layers, leaving the deeper layers to regenerate their own top cover. The transplanted top layers, conversely, eventually grow their own deep layers and the patient comes to have relatively normal skin in both areas.

MINIMUM SCAR

Healing goes on quietly under the grafted skin. At the end of three weeks or less the stitches are removed. Scar—superficial and deep—is kept to a minimum.

The patient may need further surgical repair. He may need to have tendons transplanted; he may need bone grafts and he may have to have some deep scar removed to set free joints that have been shackled. Most of the tissues he may need can be obtained from other parts of his own body—we all carry around a number of spare parts.

Most of this repair work is well within the talents of a great number of modern doctors—it is the severe facial injuries and the most highly specialized work that is turned over to the particular skills of a plastic surgeon.

DELAY COSTLY

The point is that wounds of all kinds, including burns, are attacked nowadays with vigor and skill. It was discovered some time ago that delay in treatment, and failure to cover raw areas with grafted skin, resulted in greatly increased scarring. And scar, whether deep or superficial, results in disfigurement and disability.

In the main, as has been said above, we must furnish our own tissues for repair. Skin grafts from other donors are resorted to occasionally, as when a child is so severely burned that he cannot supply enough skin for his own graft. In such cases the father or another person with a blood type the same as the victim may furnish the needed skin.

These grafts "take" well enough at first but, as we say, they melt. But they do last six to eight weeks and in that time the burned patient can supply his own.

TWINS CAN TRADE

The exception to this rule is provided by identical twins. They can pass skin to each other and the grafts take permanently. Bone and other tissues can be transplanted from person to person and they do well enough in their new environments. All this is meticulous work.

It is of the utmost importance that infection be avoided — damaged tissues are most susceptible to infection. The antibiotics have been a tremendous aid to the surgery of repair.

MORALE TEST

Throughout all this — and these proceedings may take weeks or months—the patient's morale may be put to a severe test. He may suffer a good deal of pain and shock at the time of his injury; he must endure much discomfort and may have to lie in bed swathed in massive dressings or encased in casts.

He may have to face the fact he cannot entirely be restored to normal, either in appearance or in function of his body.

He needs bolstering in many ways. He needs constant encouragement from those close to him. He needs, when he can manage it, some form of occupational therapy to take his mind off himself and to convince him that he can acquire new skills, especially if his injury has robbed him permanently of his former skills.

Above all, what open sympathy he gets must be of the right kind. He must be regarded and treated as a normal person, who can compensate, through courage and determination, for whatever he has lost.

Salty Sake Case Solved

OSAKA, Japa (AP) — Osaka police Saturday cracked "the case of the salty sake." Crew members on a freighter carrying Japan's staple rice wine have been taking a drink from each bottle in their cargo, then filling it up with sea water, police said. The result was a rash of complaints that Osaka's sake had turned salty.

Liquor Served On CNR Boat

VANCOUVER (CP)—Passengers aboard the liner Ss. Prince George Friday night became the first persons to enjoy cocktails at sea under British Columbia's new liquor legislation.

A cocktail lounge was opened to passengers a short time after the Canadian National Steamships vessel left Vancouver for a 10-day cruise to Skagway, Alaska.

The Prince George was chartered for the trip by some 200 members of Rotary International.

Besides the cocktail-room service, passengers will be able to order beer and wine with meals.

OLD TAXATION

As early as 1763 an assessment act in Nova Scotia provided for taxation on real and personal property.

Taxes on Cars Too High, Automobile Club Told

Taxes on cars are too high, H. R. Chauncey of Calgary, president of the Canadian Automobile Club, told a gathering of Victoria Automobile Club directors Friday.

"There were 325,000 cars sold in Canada last year and the federal government collected taxes amounting to $425 on each one," he said.

He said the Canadian Automobile Club now has 227,000 members in affiliated clubs across Canada. It was reorganized this year after 25 years of inactivity, he said.

"There is a need for an organization like ours," he said, "but all that has been done in the past is provide speakers for different organizations."

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Bob Carpenter, owner of the Philadelphia Phillies, has publicly apologized to infielder Granny Hamner, who had a private detective arrested for following him and angrily threatened to do something about such trespassing on his private rights. Carpenter explained that his gumshoe was following the wrong man but it was interesting to note that major league owners are still checking into the private lives of their players.

This was common practice in bygone days and John McGraw of the New York Giants, in particular, was a great believer in knowing what his players did when they weren't in uniform. He surprised a lot of them by calling them in and giving them a play-by-play account of their actions when they broke training. But pitcher Bugs Raymond, quite a colorful character in his day, outsmarted McGraw at least once—and also got roommate Rube Marquard into his manager's bad books for some time.

Raymond, who probably knew he was suspect, used to visit the gin mills regularly and protected himself by introducing himself as Marquard. It was duly reported to McGraw that one of his pitchers, named Marquard, was spending far too much time in saloons. McGraw called Marquard in one day and fined him $500 despite protests of outraged innocence. Marquard eventually got his money back, about two years later.

Then there was the case of Bucky Harris and Joe Page. The southpaw relief star of the Yankees pitched his club into the world series in 1947 but he couldn't get any one out the next year. The Yankees had him checked and Harris was given the information that Page was having the time of his life when he should have been in bed. Harris declined to do anything about it and when his club was nosed out of the pennant in 1948, he lost his job and Casey Stengel took over.

All of which is interesting enough but the question is whether a club has the moral right to check into the private lives of its players. One can understand that there is a right to demand, and expect, an employee to conduct himself with reasonable propriety in his off hours but is there a right to have him shadowed so that his every action is known? I can't help but wonder what Carpenter's reaction would be if the Phillies should doubt he was conducting himself in a manner befitting an employer and confronted him with the evidence if their suspicions should be proven correct.

Youthful Eagles' Athletic Teams Honored at Banquet

Eagles' soccer and basketball teams met with much success this season, but highlight came Thursday night when 138 boys and girls of championship teams were feted at the annual banquet and presentation. Three Eagle teams lost out in their bid for provincial honors at the annual Tournament of Champions early in May after sweeping Island honors. Here, Jim Stothard, captain of Division I soccer team, feels he is left out as Dave Pollard, captain of Division IV soccer team (second from left), and Walt Benson, Division III captain (right), get most of the attention from Loretta Mitchell, bantam girls' basketball captain.

Youngest team in attendance at the annual banquet was Division V soccer team, which reached the finals in all competitions in their class and won the league championship by defeating Shepherd's Dairy. Team members are, left to right, back row: Wilf Sadler, manager; Mosman Cook and Harry Youson, members of the executive, and coach John Weldon. Middle row: Steve Lezetc, Teddy Cook, Peter Bridgewood, Darrell McIntyre, Alex Lacey, John McDonald and John Youson. Front row: Ron McMicking, Bruce Pollard, Peter Dean (captain), Henry Stefanek, Ronnie Lacey (mascot), and Bobby Turner. Absent were Allen Glen, Gary Robbins, Jack Henson and Mike Mason.

Victoria Shamrocks and PNE Indians remained in a first-place tie in the Inter-City Lacrosse League last night as both teams scored their sixth victory in seven games.

Shamrocks, scoring six goals in the third period, bested the Native Sons at Nanaimo, 10-7, in a wild game which saw a total of 82 minutes in penalties.

ROYALS LACED

On the Mainland, in a game scheduled to make up for an earlier postponement, the Indians handed New Westminster Royals a 19-10 lacing. It was the seventh defeat in eight games for the young Royals.

Sons jumped into a 4-2 lead in the first quarter at Nanaimo and were ahead, 5-4, at half time. Then the Rocks came through with six of seven third-quarter goals to go ahead, 10-6. Held scoreless in the final 13 minutes, the Shamrocks limited Sons to a single goal to make it two in a row over their Island rivals.

Bob Monaghan, Jackie Northup, Whitey Severson and Harry Irwin each scored two goals for the shorthanded Rocks, who were playing without Norm Baker, Arnie Ferguson, Tom Druce, Archie Browning, Jack Sibbald and Elmer Matthews.

Barney Welch and Bobby Bremner led the losers as they divided four goals.

There were three individual fights and a free-for-all which involved fans in the hectic action.

John Lumley and Victoria's Allan Gill clashed first and both drew major penalties. Jack Blonda, a Victoria standout, and Arnie Duggan got into another scrape, and Bob Monaghan of the Rocks tangled with Soud Morelli in the third one.

The big row started when Jim Hetherington, spare Victoria goalie, reportedly swung at Bob Lumley. That brought the rest of the players on both sides into action and police had to be called to restore order. Before it ended, Rocks had 43 minutes in penalties with Larry Booth getting 16, Blonda 11 and Monaghan and Gill each five. Sons had 39 minutes with John Lumley getting 12 minutes, Duggan, Morelli and Jim Heffernan each getting five.

Blonda was the standout player of the game. He set up Harry Irwin for the tying goal, scored to make it 6-6 and then set up two more goals as the Rocks slammed through for three goals in 78 seconds while Frank King, New Nanaimo defenseman, served a third-quarter penalty.

CARL PEDERSEN
. . . Sixth Winner

C. Pedersen Chosen For Memorial Award

Carl Pedersen, one of Victoria's strongest boosters of minor sport and a tireless worker for the "little people," is the sixth winner of the Sid Thomas Memorial Trophy.

His selection for the annual award, which is in memory of the late Sid Thomas, former sports editor of the Daily Colonist, was made by Archie McKinnon, Doug Fletcher and Bruce Humber, all past winners of the coveted trophy.

SUCCEEDS McKINNON

The trophy is presented to the person judged to be the outstanding figure in Victoria amateur sports, either as a player or official, during the past sports year. Pedersen succeeds McKinnon, who won the award last year. Eddie Haddad and Peter Salmon were the first two winners.

Pedersen, who expressed surprise when informed of his good fortune, will receive a miniature trophy and a suitably engraved wrist watch donated by the Daily Colonist. A date for presentation will be set at a later date.

The decision was reached by the panel of judges after much deliberation although the choice was unanimous. Others nominated were Ed Duffin, Bob Fleming, George Kulai, Tom Carson, Charlie Lewis, Rom Knott, Les Scott and Cliff Salmond.

Pedersen was originally nominated by Ernie Mottishaw of 554 Niagara Street and he received support from Marge Hurst of 1321 Johnson Street.

BORN IN DENMARK

Born in Nesstved, Denmark, 43 years ago, Carl still retains part of his homeland in the form of a slight accent. His name seldom appears in the headlines but the time he spends coaching and organizing the youth of the city is richly rewarded as his "boys" gain sports prominence.

Settling in Victoria while in the Navy in 1940, this behind-the-scenes worker has played an active part in juvenile sports ever since.

Carl spends six nights in almost every week at various functions connected with sports but usually has Monday nights free. "If I'm lucky."

It's not an uncommon sight for his neighbors to see 11 soccer shirts and shorts hanging on the line and Carl trudging to his car on week ends loading up with soccer balls and equipment.

Sports director of the Eagles Youth Guidance Committee, Carl has coached Eagles' Division III soccer team for the past three years, and the team has reached the B.C. final each year. He has coached minor league baseball teams, including midget, bantam and juvenile, since 1945 and was one of the organizers of the minor league setup in the city.

Carl has also managed Heaneys of the Victoria and District Football Association for the past three years and was trainer for two years before that. He was also trainer for the city all-star team that met Glasgow Rangers last Wednesday.

Carl resides at 1439 Brooke Street with his wife, Doris, and two sons, Ronnie and Eddie.

BY JIM TANG

Victoria Tyees ended their 11-game home stand at Royal Athletic Park last night with their fifth victory when a two-out blooper double from the bat of Dain Clay in the eighth inning scored the tying and winning runs in a 3-2 conquest of the Edmonton Eskimos.

Victory gave the Tyees a split in the four-game series in which they faced what is probably the best pitching staff in the WIL. The Victoria club won a 14-inning thriller Thursday, 4-3, lost Friday, 9-6, and again yesterday afternoon, 6-1.

AT CALGARY MONDAY

The club takes to the air Monday morning for a 10-day road trip which opens in Calgary Monday night. They play the Stamps in single games Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, move up to Edmonton for single games Friday and Sunday and a double header Saturday, and then bus to Spokane to meet the Indians Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tyees couldn't get to Ray McNulty in the afternoon game yesterday. They scored in the first inning on a walk, fielder's choice and a single by Tom Perez. But they could never get more than one man on base in any inning after that as McNulty scattered five hits over as many innings for an easy win.

CREDITABLE EFFORT

Bill Prior turned in a creditable effort in a losing cause and but for some faulty support the result might have been different. Errors gave the Esks the tying and go-ahead runs and they clinched it with two home runs, which scored three runs, in the seventh inning.

The four-base smashes, by third baseman Don Gigli and McNulty, were the 21st and 22nd off Victoria pitching in 10 games.

DEFENSIVE GEM

Defensive feature of this game was a great play at second base by Steve Mesner, who went behind the bag for what appeared to be a certain hit and scooped it to Eddie Lake, who turned it into a double play to help hold second-inning run making to one tally.

Southpaw Berlyn Hodges got his second starting assignment in the night game and came up with a sterling effort before being taken out for a pinch-hitter in the Victoria seventh.

Hodges, matching pitch for pitch with the hard-throwing Ken Kimball, held the Eskimos scoreless for five innings to protect one-run lead his mates gave him in the first inning. But an easy fly to right field was lost in the lights for a double in the sixth and a bases on balls and a second double gave Edmonton two runs.

PRIES GAMBLED

Tyees threatened in the seventh and manager Don Pries gambled by taking Hodges, who had struck out eight, out of the game for pinch-hitter Don Lundberg with one out and two runners on. The rally ended without a run but the Tyees came right back in the eighth.

With one out, Joe Joshua, batting clean-up in a revised batting order, drew a base on balls. Pries sent him to second with a scratch single and both runners moved up, as Neil Sheridan grounded out. Then Clay, who had been hitless in his last 18 trips, looped a low fly just out of first baseman Augie Amorena's reach which was fair by inches and Pries and Joshua scored without trouble.

The win, his first, went to Mike Kanshin, who faced only seven Esks in two innings of hitless pitching. It was the 10th one-run victory in 17 wins for the Tyees.

Feature of this game was the ball-and-strike calling of plate umpire Loring, who seemed to want to get out of the cold and did his level best to get it over with in a hurry. Loring called six third strikes, four in a row, on the Tyees and at least four of them were almost unbelievably bad. The Esks had some complaints, too.

Report Says Indians Will Remain in WIL

Word was out last night that the Spokane situation would be settled and that the Indians would remain in the WIL although there was nothing definite on just what was going to happen.

Owner Roy Hotchkiss announced Friday night that he was through and that he was turning the club over to the league before it returned for a home stand on June 7. Attendance at 20 home games this season had averaged only 939.

GOOD TO JUNE 7

League president Bob Abel announced that the league would 'carry' the Indians until June 7 and Hotchkiss reported he had sent manager Don Osborn enough money to feed the club until June 7.

Meanwhile, it has been unofficially reported, Spokane groups have taken action to keep the club operative and it was said that the problem would be settled by June 7. The Spokane Chamber of Commerce and the Philadelphia Phillies, who have a working agreement with the Indians, both announced they would co-operate to the fullest.

Last night the Indians lost a one-run decision to the climbing Yakima Bears and slipped further down the league table to further complicate their woes.

Other games saw Vancouver Capilanos complete a clean sweep over Calgary Stampeders by taking a split double-header by 6-2 and 6-0 scores to tack a full game on their growing lead and Wenatchee get by Lewiston, 8-7, to continue its way up towards the leaders.

Sanchez, Moen Leave Club As Tyees Cut

Victoria Tyees got down to the WIL player limit of 17 yesterday by releasing outfielder-catcher Armando Sanchez and returning southpaw Bob Moen to Seattle Rainiers, who had sent him to Victoria on option.

That left the Tyees with catchers Milt Martin and Don Lundberg, infielders Don Pries, Steve Mesner, Eddie Lake, Tom Perez and Ron Jackson, outfielders Neil Sheridan, Dain Clay and Joe Joshua, and pitchers Bob Drilling, Hal Flinn, Bill Prior, Bill Bottler, Joe Nicholas, Mike Kanshin and Berlyn Hodges.

Nicholas was still unreported last night but he is expected to be here in time to go with the club to Calgary Monday morning.

City Athletes Do Well In B.C. School Meet

KELOWNA—A small but gallant band of athletes from four Victoria and district high schools made a brilliant showing in the British Columbia high school track and field championships, which wound up Saturday at Kelowna.

Although numbering only 12 strong, the thinclads won a total of four events in the finals Saturday, accounted for one record during the two-day meet and also boasted the senior girls' aggregate champion in Claudia Gelling of Oak Bay High School.

Miss Gelling, who won the inter-high senior girls' championship, was a double winner, taking the broad jump and high jump events and placing fourth in the discus to rack up 11½ points.

Her sparkling performance helped earn Oak Bay High a third-place finish among the 21 schools competing. Oak Bay picked up 21 points in finishing behind South Burnaby, which won the championship with 60½ points, and Vernon, which picked up 51 points.

Esquimalt, represented by Bill Dobbie, Francis Magwood and Gerry Harris, racked up 14½ points for a sixth-place finish. Victoria High and Mount View, represented by George Robbins, both finished well down the list, Victoria High had five points and Mount View, three-and-a-half.

In zone competition, the Greater Victoria schools finished third among the six zones. Okanagan schools finished first and the Greater Vancouver zone placed second.

In addition to Miss Gelling's two victories, the lanky Dobbie easily won the open discus although he failed to match his record-breaking toss of 124 feet, three-and-a-half-inches established Friday in the elimination events.

Sue Burnett of Oak Bay High School won the 60-yard dash for the other Victoria victory.

Mike Chambers of Victoria High School finished second in the three-mile run, duplicating his performance in last year's B.C. meet at Victoria.

All players are asked to attend the sessions, which start at 7 p.m.

Francis Takes Feature

Taking the lead on the first lap and holding it all the way, Dave Francis captured the "A" main event in a stock car meet at Western Speedway last night before about 1,500 spectators.

In addition to his victory in the feature event, Francis drove his No. 22 car to a win in the third heat. Mike Newton was the only other double winner, taking the first heat and the helmet dash.

Digger O'Dell of Ladysmith, driving No. 88, established a track record when he was clocked in 25.70 in the time trials. It was the first stock car meet held on the half-mile dirt oval.

The spectators received plenty of thrills. The main event was featured by a pile up and several spinouts as only six of the starting entry of 17 cars finished the grind. One car caught fire in the infield and Mel Price rolled his car before the time trials and, although uninjured, he was through for the night.

Results follow:

Main event—1, Dave Francis; 2, Lamont Brooks; 3, Ed Kosienuk.
Helmet dash—1, Mike Newton; 2, Digger O'Dell; 3, Ray Pottinger.

Hunting of Fawns, Does Advocated at Convention

NANAIMO — Widening of deer-hunting regulations to include fawns and does has been advocated by Burton Lauckhart, director, Washington State Game Management Department.

Speaking Friday at the eighth annual B.C. game convention here, Mr. Lauckhart said sentiment prevents hunting of does and fawns which might "very well die naturally during the season."

He described deer reproduction as a "harvest." He added that with proper control of hunting both male and female deer and offspring herds can be maintained at an even level.

However, Mr. Lauckhart stated any open season on fawns, does and bucks depends entirely on highly localized conditions of food supply.

"Food supply determines the carrying capacity of a given area, beyond which a certain number of animals cannot survive."

POLLUTION CONTROL

A resolution calling for creation by the British Columbia government of a fresh water pollution control agency was adopted Saturday at the convention.

Delegates represented fish and game associations from all parts of the province, as well as registered trappers, district guides and gun clubs.

The resolution urged that the control agency have authority to administer and advise on all fresh water pollution problems.

Another resolution of province-wide interest was one calling for the game commissions to ask the public works department to mark all public roads through private property.

Even Veteran Drivers On Edge Before Start Of Indianapolis '500'

BY OSCAR FRALEY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—Don't believe that the drivers aren't apprehensive as they prepare for the Memorial Day 500 which has claimed 38 lives.

"I know I always had butterflies before the race, and so does everybody else," insists Pete De Paolo, who won the 500 in 1925. "But once the race gets under way you don't have time to worry about what might happen to you."

Pete is on hand for Monday's annual motor classic and so is his uncle, Ralph De Palma, who won the race in 1915. The white-haired De Palma, who looks like a supreme court judge, won with a record speed of 89.84 miles per hours. 39 years ago, while Bill Vukovich averaged 128.74 miles per hour winning last year.

DRIVERS BETTER

"These boys today would run right over us old timers," De Palma smiles. "Equipment is a lot better now but so are the drivers."

Anxiously waiting spectators have been parked outside the speedway for two weeks now, sleeping in their cars, cooking on hotplates and buying hot water for shaving at 50 cents a crack from nearby homes. There's a regular midway along one side of the 433-acre speedway with a tiny midget race track going full blast, pony rides, a carnival, food booths and souvenir stands. The speedway also has an 18-hole golf course, with nine holes inside the two and one-half mile track. A bridge leads over the track and golfers played all week, ignoring the practicing racing cars.

This is a race in which driving should be the payoff. Because all 33 cars are equipped with Meyer-Drake engines, Champion spark plugs, Firestone tires and Perfect Circle piston rings. It's the first such mechanical sweep in history and unusual because competition among parts manufacturers is so keen.

Many mechanical items have been tested in the 500 but you probably don't know that it gave you the rear-view mirror. Just before the 1911 race, which he won, Ray Harroun took a pocket mirror out of his wife's handbag and taped it to his windshield . . . Harroun, a white-haired little man, is retired but he's on hand to watch the sprouts strut their stuff.

RAIN PREDICTED

Rain is predicted for Monday, but the drivers are more interested in what the temperature will be. That brick asphalt track got up to 130 degrees when the sun baked it last year. Riding just a few inches above that inferno, with their legs wrapped around a blazing motor, eight drivers wound up in the hospital with heat exhaustion the last time . . .

Wilbur Shaw, now speedway president, won this race three times to become the biggest money winner with earnings of $91,300. The race this year will be worth about $90,000, but the driver only gets about 40 per cent. This is because the car owners have an average of $45,000 sunk in each car—and, too often, after the race is over they aren't worth 45 cents.

Longden Gets Acquainted with Blue Sail

A Canadian flavor has been added to the famous English Derby this year. Veteran jockey Johnny Longden, English born, but Alberta raised, examines Blue Sail, Canadian-owned entry in the classic stake. At right is G. M. (Max) Bell of Calgary, co-owner with Frank McMahon of Calgary, of Blue Sail. The colt is rated as a strong contender, especially if the track is soft at Epsom Downs next Wednesday.

| Pittsburgh | 13 | 30 | .302 | 13½ |

Both Milwaukee Braves and New York Giants were beaten yesterday as the National League flag chase tightened up a bit more.

But over in the American League, the three top teams put more daylight between themselves and the rest of the pack as the race continued to develop into a private scrap between Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees.

BROOKS BEAT MAGLIE

Brooklyn Dodgers ended a four-game losing streak and a six-game New York winning streak as they bested Sal Maglie, an old nemesis, 4-2. Carl Erskine had no-hitter going until Willie Mays hit his 12th home run in the fifth inning to tie the score temporarily.

Brooklyn's Gil Hodges and Giants' Al Dark traded home runs in the sixth to leave it at 2-2 but Pee Wee Reese hit one out of the park after Junior Gilliam had singled in the ninth to win it.

Meanwhile, Frank Thomas drove in two runs with a home run and double as Pittsburgh Pirates made good use of four hits to upset Philadelphia Phils, 3-2.

Veteran Howie Pollett shut out the hard-hitting Cincinnati Reds for the first time this season and veteran Walker Cooper hit a bases-loaded home run as Chicago Cubs took a 6-0 victory.

RECORD CROWD

In the other game in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Braves, 12-7, before a record Milwaukee crowd of 40,001.

Results left only five and a half games separating the seventh-place Cubs from the first-place Braves.

Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle were batting stars in the American League as New York Yankees trimmed Boston Red Sox, 10-2. Berra batted in six runs, four of them with a grand-slam home run, and Mantle extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a home run, double and single.

WILLIAMS HOMERS

One of the two hits the Bosox managed off Harry Byrd and Johnny Sain was a long home run by Ted Williams.

However, Cleveland Indians maintained their lead by blanking Detroit Tigers, 12-0, as Bob Lemon scored his seventh win in eight decisions.

Chicago White Sox stuck right along in second spot only percentage points behind the Indians and two and a half games ahead of the Yankees by getting their eighth straight win, an 11-4 romp over Baltimore Orioles, who have now lost 10 in a row.

In the other game, only 1,412 fans showed up at Philadelphia to see the Athletics edge past Washington Senators, 7-5.

Colorful Tales of Turf Flourish As Historic Epsom Derby Nears

BY ALAN HARVEY

EPSOM, England (CP)—Tall tales of the turf flourish around any racetrack, and doubly so at Epsom Downs in Derby week.

Racing folk live on their memories. Of all England's famous races, none can compare with the Derby in richness of recollection.

For instance, there was the time in 1913 when a crazed suffragette named Emily Wilding Davison ran on the track and flung herself under the hooves of the royal horse Anmer, suffering fatal injuries.

Here are some other vivid moments from Derby archives:

In 1864, a beautiful woman named Lady Florence Paget was the queen of London society. Virtually at the altar she jilted her fiance, Henry Chaplin and ran off with the rich young Marquis of Hastings, a big betting man.

REVENGE PLOTTED

Chaplin plotted his revenge. He purchased the colt Hermit and prepared it for the 1867 Derby, betting large sums with Lord Hastings. Ten days before the Derby, Hermit broke a blood vessel, receded to 66-to-1 in the betting but still won the Derby by a neck in a tingling finish. Lord Hastings lost £100,000 and—so the story goes—said on his deathbed that Hermit broke his heart.

In 1908, an obscure Italian trainer named Chevalier Ginistrelli had a famous mare named Signorina which despised all the nobly-bred stallions brought to her, showing interest only in an unfashionable steed named Chaleureux. Signor Ginistrelli called it a "love match," arranged a mating and three years later led in the Derby winner. Signorinetta, a 100-to-1 shot sired by the despised Chaleureux out of Signorina.

FIRST FILLY WINNER

In 1801, the first filly, Eleanor, won the derby, a few days before the race her groom on his deathbed summoned a clergyman and whispered: "Depend on it, sir, Eleanor is a bell of a mare!"

And so the Derby stories grow. If Blue Sails wins the 175th running on Wednesday, another romantic chapter will be added, for, the colt was trained in Ireland, is owned by two Canadians and will be ridden by an American. The co-owners are Max Bell and Frank McMahon of Calgary and the jockey is Johnny Longden.

Mainland Club Extends Rangers in 3-0 Loss

VANCOUVER (CP)—The injury-plagued B.C. Mainland All-Stars rebounded from a disastrous 9-0 licking last Monday to lose a respectable 3-0 decision to Glasgow's famed Rangers here Saturday before 8,000 fans.

A big break gave Rangers the opportunity to score three quick goals in the second half after they had been held to a scoreless deadlock in the first half.

The break came when Pat Philley, centre half and backbone of the B.C. defence, had to leave the field due to a leg injury after 10 minutes of the second half had been played.

SIMPSON GETS TWO

Only 20 seconds after Philley's departure centre forward Billy Simpson romped through the disorganized All-Star defenders for Glasgow's first goal and repeated his feat 40 seconds later.

Outside left John Hubbard got the third goal on another series of defensive blunders five minutes later. But once again the All-Stars rebounded from this initial shock to hold the Scottish Football League A Division side at fairly even terms for the remainder of the game.

With about four minutes to go, George Young, huge international full-back, saved an almost certain goal by kicking Brian Philley's lob off the goal line. Goalie George Niven was completely out of the play.

HAD CHANCES

The All-Stars dominated the first 20 minutes of the game and had a number of chances to score, then Rangers took over for a change. For the first ten minutes of the second half All-Stars appeared to be catching their second wind against their famed opponents but faded when Pat Philley left the field.

In the last 10 minutes All-Stars forced the play. The game was played on a perfect pitch bathed in bright sunshine.

Line-ups:

Oak Bay ran its undefeated streak to five games in the Victoria and District Cricket Association yesterday at Beacon Hill pitch by defeating defending champion Albions by 23 runs.

With Oak Bay batting first, Albions did well to dismiss the league-leaders for 78 runs. Fine bowling by Doidge and Hendra kept the runs down, Doidge taking three wickets for four runs and Hendra, five for 21. Three of these wickets were taken in four balls.

Albions in reply could muster only 55 runs as good bowling by Sparks and Parkins and good slip catching by Parkins resulted in the dismissal of four Albion batsmen.

Two matches are scheduled today. Incogs traveling to Duncan to meet Cowichan and Alcos playing Five C's at Windsor Park in a match originally scheduled for yesterday.

Paulins Get World Title Tourney Bid

—WINNIPEG (CP)—Winnipeg Paulins, Canadian senior basketball champions, have been invited to compete in the second annual Pan-American world basketball championship at Rio de Janeiro, next October.

The invitation was tendered to Paulins' team manager, Al Whitey Carlson, by W. A. Irwin, national secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association, who had previously been approached by Pan-American officials.

If Paulins accept the invitation, and Carlson says they intend to make "every effort" to do so, it would be the first time a Canadian team has participated.

The Winnipeg team, however, must raise between $6,000 and $7,000 to cover traveling expenses of the trip.

SIDELINERS TO MEET

Shamrocks Sideliners Club will hold a meeting at the Williams Hall, Broughton Street, Monday night at 8. All interested are invited to attend.

Even Veteran Drivers On Edge Before Start Of Indianapolis '500'

BY OSCAR FRALEY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—Don't believe that the drivers aren't apprehensive as they prepare for the Memorial Day 500 which has claimed 38 lives.

"I know I always had butterflies before the race, and so does everybody else," insists Pete De Paolo, who won the 500 in 1925. "But once the race gets under way you don't have time to worry about what might happen to you."

Pete is on hand for Monday's annual motor classic and so is his uncle, Ralph De Palma, who won the race in 1915. The white-haired De Palma, who looks like a supreme court judge, won with a record speed of 89.84 miles per hours. 39 years ago, while Bill Vukovich averaged 128.74 miles per hour winning last year.

DRIVERS BETTER

"These boys today would run right over us old timers," De Palma smiles. "Equipment is a lot better now but so are the drivers."

Anxiously waiting spectators have been parked outside the speedway for two weeks now, sleeping in their cars, cooking on hotplates and buying hot water for shaving at 50 cents a crack from nearby homes. There's a regular midway along one side of the 433-acre speedway with a tiny midget race track going full blast, pony rides, a carnival, food booths and souvenir stands. The speedway also has an 18-hole golf course, with nine holes inside the two and one-half mile track. A bridge leads over the track and golfers played all week, ignoring the practicing racing cars.

This is a race in which driving should be the payoff. Because all 33 cars are equipped with Meyer-Drake engines, Champion spark plugs, Firestone tires and Perfect Circle piston rings. It's the first such mechanical sweep in history and unusual because competition among parts manufacturers is so keen.

Many mechanical items have been tested in the 500 but you probably don't know that it gave you the rear-view mirror. Just before the 1911 race, which he won, Ray Harroun took a pocket mirror out of his wife's handbag and taped it to his windshield . . . Harroun, a white-haired little man, is retired but he's on hand to watch the sprouts strut their stuff.

RAIN PREDICTED

Rain is predicted for Monday, but the drivers are more interested in what the temperature will be. That brick asphalt track got up to 130 degrees when the sun baked it last year. Riding just a few inches above that inferno, with their legs wrapped around a blazing motor, eight drivers wound up in the hospital with heat exhaustion the last time . . .

Wilbur Shaw, now speedway president, won this race three times to become the biggest money winner with earnings of $91,300. The race this year will be worth about $90,000, but the driver only gets about 40 per cent. This is because the car owners have an average of $45,000 sunk in each car—and, too often, after the race is over they aren't worth 45 cents.

Longden Gets Acquainted with Blue Sail

A Canadian flavor has been added to the famous English Derby this year. Veteran jockey Johnny Longden, English born, but Alberta raised, examines Blue Sail, Canadian-owned entry in the classic stake. At right is G. M. (Max) Bell of Calgary, co-owner with Frank McMahon of Calgary, of Blue Sail. The colt is rated as a strong contender, especially if the track is soft at Epsom Downs next Wednesday.

| Chicago | 18 | 21 | .462 | 11½ |
| Pittsburgh | 13 | 30 | .302 | 17½ |

Both Milwaukee Braves and New York Giants were beaten yesterday as the National League flag chase tightened up a bit more.

But over in the American League, the three top teams put more daylight between themselves and the rest of the pack as the race continued to develop into a private scrap between Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees.

BROOKS BEAT MAGLIE

Brooklyn Dodgers ended a four-game losing streak and a six-game New York winning streak as they bested Sal Maglie, an old nemesis, 4-2. Carl Erskine had no-hitter going until Willie Mays hit his 12th home run in the fifth inning to tie the score temporarily.

Brooklyn's Gil Hodges and Giants' Al Dark traded home runs in the sixth to leave it at 2-2 but Pee Wee Reese hit one out of the park after Junior Gilliam had singled in the ninth to win it.

Meanwhile, Frank Thomas drove in two runs with a home run and double as Pittsburgh Pirates made good use of four hits to upset Philadelphia Phils, 3-2.

Veteran Howie Pollett shut out the hard-hitting Cincinnati Reds for the first time this season and veteran Walker Cooper hit a bases-loaded home run as Chicago Cubs took a 6-0 victory.

RECORD CROWD

In the other game in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Braves, 12-7, before a record Milwaukee crowd of 10,001.

Results left only five and a half games separating the seventh-place Cubs from the first-place Braves.

Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle were batting stars in the American League as New York Yankees trimmed Boston Red Sox, 10-2. Berra batted in six runs, four of them with a grand-slam home run, and Mantle extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a home run, double and single.

WILLIAMS HOMERS

One of the two hits the Bosox managed off Harry Byrd and Johnny Sain was a long home run by Ted Williams.

However, Cleveland Indians maintained their lead by blanking Detroit Tigers, 12-0, as Bob Lemon scored his seventh win in eight decisions.

Chicago White Sox stuck right along in second spot only percentage points behind the Indians and two and a half games ahead of the Yankees by win, an 11-4 romp over Baltimore Orioles, who have now lost 10 in a row.

In the other game, only 1,412 fans showed up at Philadelphia to see the Athletics edge past Washington Senators, 7-5.

Colorful Tales of Turf Flourish As Historic Epsom Derby Nears

BY ALAN HARVEY

EPSOM, England (CP)—Tall tales of the turf flourish around any racetrack, and doubly so at Epsom Downs in Derby week.

Racing folk live on their memories. Of all England's famous races, none can compare with the Derby in richness of recollection.

For instance, there was the time in 1913 when a crazed suffragette named Emily Wilding Davison ran on the track and flung herself under the hooves of the royal horse Anmer, suffering fatal injuries.

Here are some other vivid moments from Derby archives:

In 1864, a beautiful woman named Lady Florence Paget was the queen of London society. Virtually at the altar she jilted her fiance, Henry Chaplin and ran off with the rich young Marquis of Hastings, a big betting man.

REVENGE PLOTTED

Chaplin plotted his revenge. He purchased the colt Hermit and prepared it for the 1867 Derby, betting large sums with Lord Hastings. Ten days before the Derby, Hermit broke a blood vessel, receded to 66-to-1 in the betting but still won the Derby by a neck in a tingling finish. Lord Hastings lost £100,000 and —so the story goes—said on his deathbed that Hermit broke his heart.

In 1908 an obscure Italian trainer named Chevalier Ginistrelli had a famous mare named Signorina which despised all the nobly-bred stallions brought to her, showing interest only in an unfashionable steed named Chaleureux. Signor Ginistrelli called it a "love match," arranged a mating and three years later led in the Derby winner. Signorinetta, a 100-to-1 shot sired by the despised Chaleureux out of Signorina.

FIRST FILLY WINNER

In 1801, the first filly, Eleanor, won the derby, a few days before the race her groom on his deathbed summoned a clergyman and whispered: "Depend on it, sir, Eleanor is a hell of a mare!"

And so the Derby stories grow. If Blue Sails wins the 175th running on Wednesday, another romantic chapter will be added, for the colt was trained in Ireland, is owned by two Canadians and will be ridden by an American. The co-owners are Max Bell and Frank McMahon of Calgary and the jockey is Johnny Longden.

Yesterday's score: Oak Bay defeated Albions by 23 runs.

Next games (today): Alcos vs. Five C's, Windsor Park. Incogs vs. Cowichan at Duncan, 2:30.

Oak Bay ran its undefeated streak to five games in the Victoria and District Cricket Association yesterday at Beacon Hill pitch by defeating defending champion Albions by 23 runs.

With Oak Bay batting first, Albions did well to dismiss the league-leaders for 78 runs. Fine bowling by Doidge and Hendra kept the runs down. Doidge taking three wickets for four runs and Hendra, five for 24. Three of these wickets were taken in four balls.

Albions in reply could muster only 55 runs as good bowling by Sparks and Parkins and good slip catching by Parkins resulted in the dismissal of four Albion batsmen.

Two matches are scheduled today. Incogs traveling to Duncan to meet Cowichan and Alcos playing Five C's at Windsor Park in a match originally scheduled for yesterday.

Paulins Get World Title Tourney Bid

WINNIPEG (CP)—Winnipeg Paulins, Canadian senior basketball champions, have been invited to compete in the second annual Pan-American world basketball championship at Rio de Janeiro, next October.

The invitation was tendered to Paulins' team manager, Al Whitey Carlson, by W. A. Irwin, national secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association, who had previously been approached by Pan-American officials.

If Paulins accept the invitation, and Carlson says they intend to make "every effort" to do so, it would be the first time a Canadian team has participated.

The Winnipeg team, however, must raise between $6,000 and $7,000 to cover traveling expenses of the trip.

SIDELINERS TO MEET

Shamrocks Sideliners Club will hold a meeting at the Williams Hall, Broughton Street, Monday night at 8. All interested are invited to attend.

Mainland Club Extends Rangers in 3-0 Loss

VANCOUVER (CP)—The injury-plagued B.C. Mainland All-Stars rebounded from a disastrous 9-0 licking last Monday to lose a respectable 3-0 decision to Glasgow's famed Rangers here Saturday before 8,000 fans.

A big break gave Rangers the opportunity to score three quick goals in the second half after they had been held to a scoreless deadlock in the first half.

The break came when Pat Philley, centre half and backbone of the B.C. defence, had to leave the field due to a leg injury after 10 minutes of the second half had been played.

SIMPSON GETS TWO

Only 20 seconds after Philley's departure centre forward Billy Simpson romped through the disorganized All-Star defenders for Glasgow's first goal and repeated his feat 40 seconds later.

Outside left John Hubbard got the third goal on another series of defensive blunders five minutes later. But once again the All-Stars rebounded from this initial shock to hold the Scottish Football League A Division side at fairly even terms for the remainder of the game.

With about four minutes to go, George Young, huge international full-back, saved an almost certain goal by kicking Brian Philley's lob off the goal line. Goalie George Niven was completely out of the play.

HAD CHANCES

The All-Stars dominated the first 20 minutes of the game and had a number of chances to score, then Rangers took over for a change. For the first ten minutes of the second half All-Stars appeared to be catching their second wind against their famed opponents but faded when Pat Philley left the field.

In the last 10 minutes All-Stars forced the play. The game was played on a perfect pitch bathed in bright sunshine.

Line-ups:

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANG

Most Victorians out fishing today will be congregated in Saanich Inlet as the annual scramble for rungs in the Victoria Salmon Sport Anglers Association's ladder derby.

A census of boathouses and sporting goods stores yesterday indicated that there would be a hot note fishermen that season [illegible] good for fishing at best could only be [illegible] The weather could change overnight and it might be a good Sunday after all, though weekend fishing in Saanich Inlet is notoriously the poorest of the week.

Hodden's Boathouse at Deep Cove reported last night that only a few boats have been out during the week and that only a few fish were taken. However there has been a host of dog fish, and weather that salmon follow closely behind obviously knowing the whereabouts of dogfish, there is bound to be feed.

Harry Heard reported from the Anchorage boathouse at Patricia Bay that there have been signs of improved fishing in the area. Last two evenings there were several good catches of coho salmon between noon and five o'clock. Largest was a 15-pounder boated by Gordon Anderson of McKenzie Ave. He was using a Spin-A-Lure from Mack's Sporting Goods.

Best fishing area has been between Willis Point and McKenzie Bay and evening fishing has been the best during the last few days. Fish are being taken on all depths with Mack's Spin-A-Lure and Tom Mack Spoons the most successful lures.

From Hill's Boathouse at Deep Cove yesterday came the report that fishing has been "fairly good" but there has been nothing outstanding in the way of catches — "just a few fish." A representative from Deep Cove Boathouse reported similar conditions.

Fishing appears to be about a month late this year. It appeared that conditions were right for a record run of salmon in the Gulf of Georgia. But the run will depend largely on the Fraser River. Many fishermen are waiting for the opening of the season with the idea that they can get their limit of salmon in a short time. And when salmon have been taking a fly they usually have been hitting at it hard. It doesn't work that way this year. The Gulf of Georgia is a big area and it may take a week or more for salmon to get into the Gulf of Georgia in large numbers.

And don't forget the prizes that are offered in the Victoria Salmon Sport Anglers Association's ladder derby. Prizes are offered for the largest fish caught in each of the four weeks and for the largest fish caught during the season. Tickets are available at the boathouses operating in the Saanich Inlet area. The derby starts on Sunday. Entry cards must be filled out every week and Monday evening is the deadline for each week's entries. There are August 29 and the next deadline is August 22. The next deadline is August 29.

Conciliation Talks Of Coast Loggers Longest on Record

BY BILL MAYOR

A record for length of conciliation talks has been set between the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CCL) and Coast lumber operators—the two powerful groups being closeted three weeks with conciliation officer Reg. Clements.

To date, no reports on progress if any have come from the Vancouver meeting hall.

The union presented eight requests and Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining for the Coast timber operators, proposed 16 contract changes affecting the 12,000 union members.

In past contract negotiations sessions held with a conciliation officer have seemed much briefer and the entire dispute has rarely been referred to a conciliation board.

Shut in negotiations with the B.C. Electric Co. and the street Railwaymen's Union (AFL) TLC seeking to arrive at a settlement on wages and fringe benefits for three offices and districts in Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster.

Interior Operations Reopening

Mining Picture Looks Brighter

Colonist Business Editor

It takes more than one, or even two, swallows to make a summer, but a couple of base metal mines are re-opening in the Interior of British Columbia to give a rather brighter turn to this province's depressed mining industry.

As soon as the weather makes road movement possible, the Sunshine Lardeau and Estella mines are due to resume mining.

Sunshine Lardeau, operated by Berens River Mines, is in the Lardeau district and is a silver-lead-zinc producer. Officials expect it to go into full production about the middle of June or at the peak up period is over.

NEW BLOCK

The other reopening is due at Estella Mines in the Wood district. The company, which has a mill here, the property is being worked on a new ore block opened last year and developed a year or two below the present workings.

The majority of base metal mines in the province except those which have weathered the storm of low metal prices are still withholding their decisions on a resumption.

Most of them depend mainly upon lead and zinc for their profits and while the prices of those metals are now above their [illegible] the majority.

The demand for zinc is still weak, and there is little to indicate any appreciable advance in price for this metal.

We drew attention last week to the importance of the Lake Cowichan district for the logging industry on Vancouver Island and since then it has been drawn to our attention that no fewer than four of the major companies are said to be jockeying for forest management licenses in that area.

The companies with interests in the area are MacMillan & Bloedel, Canadian Western Lumber, B.C. Forest Products and Alaska Pine.

At least one of these companies plans to build a pulp plant, while others aim to extend present milling facilities.

The prize is a big one, and the minister of lands and forests has a ticklish problem on hand before he can recommend who is most deserving of the license.

COPPER HOPES SOAR

Hopes of an important high-grade copper operation at Cowichan Lake are becoming brighter, according to Ossie MacDonald, president of Cowichan Copper Company.

The ore body at present under development has been drifted southward for 132 feet and ore is still in the south face. To the north the mineral is cut off by a fault but a few feet under the fault drained three feet of massive chalcopyrite and 3½ feet of sphalerite with chalcopyrite showings. This section will be explored.

Mr. MacDonald says more than 1,000 tons formed the third shipment of picked ore sent to the Tacoma smelter from Crofton. It is expected to average 7 per cent copper or better.

The second shipment of ore was also sorted $32 per ton. The company after transportation and smelter costs for each shipment of ore to the smelter can expect a profit of $20 per ton.

Mr. MacDonald believes the net proceeds of shipments of sorted ore will be made on a [illegible] development program.

The company has cards on properties adjacent to the lake overlooking Yeatman and Bench Bay.

The government's wheat policy is reviewed in the current weekly grain letter published by James Richardson and Sons Ltd.

Key Business Lines In Moderate Decline

NEW YORK (AP)—The last week in May saw a moderate decline in several key lines of United States business.

Layoffs arose chiefly from weather and other temporary factors. Business sentiment continued optimistic. Most of the long-term indicators showed no change.

Auto production was off 5 per cent from the previous week, mainly because the parts supply was cut back to meet the reduced assembly schedule. Output was 109,000 cars and trucks, compared with 115,000 the week before and 134,000 in the same week last year.

Steel production was off 5 per cent from the previous week, because the pace-setting big three scheduled no work on the Saturday before Memorial Day.

The Island and Mainland groups gathered in the B.C. Lumber Association headquar ters and discussed a proposal to combine common and clear num ber for conformity with uniform retail practices.

The effect of the proposal would be to change common grades to frames and other more close-grained and use of the lumber.

The meeting, sponsored by the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, is one of 16 being held throughout the Douglas fir producing areas of Oregon Washington, northern California and B.C.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A reader writes to ask how to repair a leaky faucet. Worn washers are the most common cause of leaky faucets. Turn off the water supply to the faucet, remove the handle, stem and packing nut. Then remove the worn washer and replace it with a new one of the same size. Reassemble the faucet and turn on the water supply.

A reader asks how to remove a broken screw from a piece of wood. Try to grip the head of the screw with a pair of pliers and turn it out. If the head is broken off, drill a hole in the center of the screw and use a screw extractor.

A reader asks how to remove a stain from a mahogany table top. Rub the stain with a cloth dipped in oxalic acid solution (1 tablespoon to 1 cup of water). Then wash with clear water and dry.

A reader asks how to clean a brass lamp. Use a paste of whiting and ammonia. Rub on with a soft cloth, then polish with a dry cloth.

A reader asks how to remove paint from glass. Use a razor blade scraper. Hold it at a low angle and scrape carefully.

A reader asks how to repair a cracked plaster wall. Widen the crack slightly with a cold chisel. Then fill with plaster of Paris mixed with water to a thick paste.

A reader asks how to remove a dent from a piece of furniture. Place a damp cloth over the dent and apply a hot iron. The steam will swell the wood fibers and raise the dent.

Who is Martin Pretorius?

He is a descendant of the ancient Pretorius family which migrated from Holland to South Africa during the early adventurous days of the Dutch East India Company. The city of his birth, Pretoria, was named for General Martinus Pretorius, founder and first president of the Transvaal, Dutch Republic of South Africa.

Martin Pretorius is now President of the Pretoria Valley Nutritional Research Foundation, Escondido, California.

What did Pretorius discover in Africa?

WHILE IN THE SERVICE of the South African government, Martin Pretorius came in close contact with primitive people. He was impressed with their well developed bodies and abundant vitality. Continued observation brought the realization that these people did not have headaches, poor circulation, sluggish elimination, bad complexions, flabby tissues, chronic fatigue, sleeplessness, irritability, "jumpy nerves," failing glands, poor eyesight. Nor did they suffer from arthritis, catarrh, colds, colitis, asthma, sinus, diabetes, skin diseases, nervousness, constipation, heartburn, indigestion, rheumatism, ulcers. Furthermore, these primitives had no cancer, heart trouble, and did not die from high blood pressure.

But as soon as these superbly healthy and happy natives migrated to the cities and adopted city ways of living and eating, he noted that they began to suffer from the same ailments and diseases responsible for so much unhappiness among civilized people.

Investigation of the causes of this change was for Martin Pretorius the beginning of a lifetime career of study, research and service to mankind.

Feeling better is up to you!

IMPROPER EATING AND LIVING HABITS are responsible for most of our disorders and troubles today. A better understanding of your body, how it functions, and what its nutritional requirements are, as presented in these Pretorius Motion Pictures, can show you the way to overcome your disorders, make you look and feel younger, improve your eyesight and complexion, tone up flabby, sagging tissues, give you greater vitality and endurance, and help you reduce or gain weight, you don't have to be a FANATIC or "go Primitive" to regain your health and zest for living.

Here's what people say about Pretorius

"We are particularly pleased with the response we are getting from your articles on diet." — DAILY MIRROR, N.Y.

"I have had the pleasure of hearing Martin Pretorius twice and thoroughly enjoyed both lectures." — ELEANOR RATCHES, Assistant Dean of Women, Boston University.

"His lectures proved not only to be very interesting, but unusually helpful. The fact that the audience remained for two hours, and were then reluctant to go, is ample evidence of the attitude of his hearers." — FRANK C. SPRAGUE, President, Northeastern University.

"After hearing one of your lectures on Food Science, I was so impressed with your broad knowledge of the subject that I was pleased when you addressed our Physical Directors' Society at their regular meeting at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The members present were unanimous in endorsing your work." — GEORGE L. LISTMAN, State Director of Physical Education, Mass.

Joe glared at the typewritten sheet but Marjory, staring goofily after the retreating "lollipop," was oblivious

THE moment the noon whistle sounded Joe pulled off his mechanic's jumper and hurried for McBride's department store to see Marjory. He'd been worried about their quarrel last night when she told him she liked "romantic men" instead of Gays who knew how to talk about picture painting and poetry and stuff. Joe didn't but he knew she used to like him. Joe Burns and he wasn't wearing any longer. He was going to ask her to marry him. She'd never know how foolish it made him feel to say such things.

Approaching the typewriter section where Marjory worked he was annoyed with a man customer. A tall man with brown flaring sideburns who was willing to wait while one of the demonstrators showed him the different machines and explained their advantages for accurate typewriting. Marjory kept that gooey look on her face she wore when watching Charles Boyer in the movies. Joe swallowed. This was bad. He marched up to the counter just as the guy was saying: "But no now."

Not noticing Joe Marjory turned the portable around and read what had been written on the practice sheet. He grinned and she crowded up to look at it. Joe saw that it was a [illegible] and Marjory [illegible]

CLAYOQUOT: Place of Changing People

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

CLAYOQUOT, a little more than half way up the west coast of Vancouver Island, is the oldest white settlement in those regions. Though other communities have since been established and out-grown it both in population and industry. With the exception of Nootka and its historical Friendly Cove this small settlement, which even today consists of scarcely a dozen buildings and only half a dozen families, is more closely associated with the early history of the west coast than any other point.

The name is derived from the Indian words ... which means another or different and ... people. Hence "Clayoquot," the correct pronunciation, means people of different faith and they used to be. According to Rev. A. J. Brabant, the first resident Roman ... missionary on the west coast, 1874-1897, and who frequently visited Clayoquot, Hesquiat recorded that the people Indians residing there were extremely quiet and peaceful, not like the treacherous

O'er the Sea to Skye

By JAMES KERR

ISLANDS seem to exercise a peculiar fascination for many of us and so, years ago, following out the "urge" I was impelled to spend a vacation, cruising along the Hebridean Isles on the West Coast of Scotland. But "The Hebrides" is too big for the compass of the present article. So let Jura, Colonsay, Mull, North and South Uist, Harris, Lewis and all the other members of the Hebridean family wait meanwhile, and let us visit Skye.

The queen of them all. Someone has remarked that to see Scotland at her best you must visit the Western Isles. But best is not that well-known traveller H. V. Morton in his book "In Search of Scotland" has to say about the hills of Skye: "I have spent nights on the Sinai Desert. I have slept in the valley of the dead in Egypt. I have seen the sun rise from the summit of the Schreckhorn in Switzerland. I have camped in the Rocky Mountains . . . but I have never seen anything like the Coolins, those enchanting hills of Skye, standing grape-blue and still in the morning sunshine."

And to quote from that comparatively recent lilting song "The Road to the Isles":

"A lad crooning to pullin' me away,
As I take I wi' my cromak to the road,
The far Coolins are puttin' love on me
As step I wi' the sunlight for my load.

Tummel and Loch Rannoch and Lochaber I will go,
By heather tracks wi' heaven in your inner heart, braggart's in my step,
You've never smelt the tangle o' the Isles,
Oh the far Coolins are puttin' love on me
As step I wi' my cromak to the Isles."

Sailing over the sea to Skye and her sister isles, everything was calm and tranquil in those summer days, long prior to the present disturbed era. There were no discordant sounds whatever except perhaps for the screaming of the gulls, in competitive pursuit of something edible, thrown into the sea by sympathetic passengers. Life on those islands moves on with a complete absence of anything approaching "rush." Even snails are not unduly hurried, or were not at that time. On the roadside a mile or two in land on Skye I noticed the usual type of post office pillar box and curious to ascertain the times of the collections. I found this inscription: "Next when wet clouds cease to collect on Tuesday, June 27" this being almost a week ahead.

Dunvegan the principal port of Skye, is one of the most interesting parts of the island. Here is situated Dunvegan Castle, the residence of the chief of the Clan MacLeod. The castle is said to have been founded as early as the ninth century, the high tower having been added about the thirteenth. A portion of the building is of more recent date and the whole is maintained in good repair.

Built on a rocky promontory the fortress must have proved an insurmountable barrier to the attacking enemies of the clan. In the south tower is the fairy room which contains the fairy flag said to have been taken by a MacLeod from a Saracen chief during the Crusades. Among other things of interest to be seen in the castle are several relics connected with Flora Macdonald, bringing to mind the exciting story of how the Prince Charlie's rescue by this heroic young woman. Hunted by 2,000 soldiers, and with the surrounding seas guarded by innumerable war craft, the prince was first captive within a forester's hut when Flora arrived. A huge fortune slipped through the fingers of these soldiers who allowed her to pass with a young manservant whose Irish passport was inscribed with the name "Betty Burke" but who in reality bore the name of the ancient Royal House of Scotland who in short was none other than Prince Charles himself.

The whole atmosphere is redolent with history. Having previously equipped myself with a rereading of Boswell's "Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides," I discovered that I had the delightful feeling at every turn of following in the wake of those two famous 18th century tourists, Boswell and Johnson. If Dr. Johnson had not visited Scotland in the year 1773 we should have missed many delightful episodes which Boswell faithfully records in the Journal. Never were 96 days better spent than those which fell in that year, between August 18 and November 22, and never were days better chronicled. What a pleasant light all this casts upon holidays! Samuel Johnson must live for ever in the memories of Fleet Street but the Johnson of London needed those travels to round out his philosophy, and so because Johnson took holiday the world is richer for ever. But Dr. Johnson and his fellow traveler had much to contend with, in their tour of the Hebrides as compared with present-day modes of progression. Sailing boats and horse-drawn vehicles were the means employed, their movements being governed by the weather. Now when wet clouds cease to collect on Tuesday, June 27 (as I myself did in two separate summers). When in that northern landscape night is almost obliterated. One loses an unconscious sense of reluctance in sailing away from the Isles, back to the crowded marts of the world. But refreshing memories are ours and go with us. Dr. Johnson in his own volume "A Journey to the Western Islands" puts it thus: "At Dunvegan I tasted Lotus and was in danger of forgetting that I was ever to depart." Mr. Boswell again reproached me with my sluggishness and softness. I had no very fair reply to make, and we agreed to resume our journey.

It is worth noting that on all these islands Sabbath observance is the rule. Fishermen do not work on Sunday in these parts. A minister of a reformed Presbyterian church in Edinburgh once told me that on the Sabbath morning Highlanders are in a Presbyterian church, then go on to the afternoon to the Gaelic service which was attended by a much larger representation of the inhabitants. Although we from the steamer all happened to be English-speaking ones, and not understanding a word of the language used, yet we could not but feel we were in an atmosphere of reverent worship. Apart even from the sermon and prayers the singing of the psalms in Gaelic in a minor key had a strange indescribable effect on the ear, resembling nothing so much as the wailing and lament of the bagpipes.

The main industries of Skye and its neighbor isles are agriculture (the rocky soil by dint of hard labor being made as productive as possible), the weaving of the world-famous Harris tweeds and fishing. The islanders themselves are generally tall and of fine physique and possessed of mental and moral grit. Numbers of them join the military and police forces of their country, many distinguishing themselves in both the First and Second World Wars. Others have succeeded in various business callings and in all the professions. A great many have emigrated to the Western States and Canada, and there are not many communities of any size in North America, in which there is not to be found a Campbell, a MacLeod, a MacDonald, a MacKenzie or some other kindred name. Time and again, however, memories of home crowd in upon the mind for those far-off isles ever remain home to those who have gone from them, are even into the third and fourth generation.

PROOF WAS THERE

After having arranged a conference in a provincial city, a famous psychiatrist chatted with the mayor.

"Tell me, professor," the city father asked, "how can one tell that a person is insane?"

"It's very simple. One begins by asking any question that's within the scope of any normal person, for instance: 'Captain Cook made three trips around the world, and met death on one of them. On which one of those voyages did Cook die?'"

The mayor, after reflecting a moment, replied:

"Couldn't you ask me another question? I'm not very well versed on explorations."

The Next Dance!

by Arthur Murray

THREE more sprightly polka steps you should master if you want to have a well-rounded routine: the Polka Step With a Hop, the Polka Step Without a Hop, and the Polka Turn, are on our agenda today. Like the steps we took up yesterday, these are easy to learn and are warm with the lively enchantment of this traditional dance.

Arthur Murray Says:

1. Girls, take long, exaggerated steps as you practice. Then a normally long step in dancing will be easy.
2. If possible, practice before a mirror. See how you look to others.
3. Don't be afraid to pause in position with your partner, at the beginning of each dance to catch the music's tempo.
4. Never count time aloud!
5. Men, if you're the strong, silent type, at least smile.

LET'S look first at the boy's part in the Polka Step With a Hop:

The Polka Step with Hop is gay and fancy-free. Try it!

NOW LET'S GET on to the Polka Turn: boy's part first:

Most of your time you'll be dancing with your partner, but you'll have lots of fun dancing with other partners, too. Make them feel welcome and comfortable, and you'll have lots of opportunity for that.

To get the crowd laughing, make up some typical advice to the lovelorn questions and answers, giving the typed questions to the young ladies and the replies to the young men. Let them match up each set to find their next partner. The confused result, until the right answers come to the right questions, will make for a lot of laughs!

Next Sunday: Arthur Murray, the Tango, and more sparkling party hints.

I See Prince Charles

. . . A Few Hours Old

By JOHN DEAN

THE day Prince Charles was our babies when a war-torn home crowned the first year of the royal marriage—a happy, crowded year for Princess Elizabeth. So we broke away for me.

Then, early in the months when I moved, we toured all Britain.

In the beginning the Duke did not [illegible]. He was to [illegible] but as he [illegible] I realized [illegible] and enjoyment.

He [illegible] was becoming popular, the Duke's public because [illegible] aside he really likes [illegible] meeting people from [illegible] out to the newest and the oldest children.

For weeks to [illegible] we [illegible] Royal [illegible] pulled [illegible] miles [illegible] ments were to begin [illegible] My [illegible] in the [illegible] next to [illegible] of the Duke.

As I rushed around preparing him for the day's round of duties he would not always, of course, be feeling too good. But when he alighted he was always all smiles.

The Princess, when she left the train, would often wear a pair of white gloves. On rejoining the train in the afternoon her gloves I saw were discolored with [illegible] and [illegible].

I remember her indignation when it was reported to her that there had been pilfering of food parcels sent to the Royal [illegible] as wedding presents and afterwards distributed to the poor and needy.

Soldiers were sorting them, and someone asked her whether the pilfering had been done by Grenadier Guards. "Certainly not," she replied at once. "The Grenadier would never do such a thing!"

She was [illegible] when she saw [illegible] meeting at Windsor [illegible] parade rehearsal and I remember one [illegible] day sent [illegible] message asking that the [illegible] duty outside [illegible] should be [illegible] posted on the shady side of the road.

Of all the Royal homes we stayed at the most primitive was the Palace of Holyrood house where some of the staff slept on hard beds in window recesses.

My favorite was Windsor Castle which is packed with priceless treasures. There I had a lovely room looking down the Long Walk.

GUARD ON GEMS

In May, 1949, we were all very excited at the prospect of a State visit to France. The Duke does not speak good French, in fact, he has no other languages but ever. Greek.

In our party traveling by the night ferry were Bobo, the Princess' nanny; Usher, detective, and Carl Pickman, chief valet.

On the journey it was my responsibility to look after the Princess' brown leather jewel case. This was a great worry to me in the surging crowd at the Gare du Nord in Paris. I clung to the case like grim death for fear it would be wrenched from my hands in the melee.

At the same time I had dozens of pieces of baggage to shepherd into the hands of screaming porters.

On the Sunday after our arrival the Duke was taken ill with some stomach upset possibly caused by something he had eaten. He looked green and the Princess was so worried about him that she wanted to cancel his engagements for the rest of the day.

The Duke would not hear of [illegible] he [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible].

[illegible] in fact [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Mr. Hemingway—Hobo to Hero

(Last of four articles on Ernest Hemingway, the most controversial of American writers, whose adventurous life has made him a legend even to millions who have never read his powerful novels.)

By JOHN GROVER

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, the flamboyant swashbuckler of literature, is the wounded man he writes about so frequently in his great stories.

The deep hurts he has taken from life, war wounds and the deeper wounds in his mind and heart, cry out from his books.

He writes with his own blood, of things that have happened to him.

Hemingway, the grizzled, greying, middle-aged peer of modern authors, has been the spokesman of his generation for 30 years. It used to be "lost." Now it's middle-aged and sort of muddled.

An expatriate most of his adult life, Hemingway in his growth nevertheless mirrors the growth of the country and the middle-aged generation which has lived through two great wars, a depression, and is now interested mostly in security and peace. It is still troubled and uncertain.

TRAILS OF '26

Hemingway romanticized his generation in 1926 when he published "The Sun Also Rises." This set a pattern for the youth of that time who are in their 50s today. He made it fashionable to be disillusioned, pleasure seeking and self-centred. The generation of youth in the First World War era emerged from the conflict bitter and cynical. Wounded in spirits, they accepted Hemingway's dictum that the only way of life was "to pay it along and just not make trouble for people" as the emasculated Jake Barnes remarks in the book.

The smashed and lacerated man is Hemingway himself.

Life has hurt and harried him since his teen-age days. He has withdrawn into his shell licking his wounds alone, making his hurts and frustrations into some of the greatest literature in our language.

MAN HE WAS

His confused and apparently unhappy childhood is reflected in his first book of short stories, "In Our Time." The Nick Adams in many of these sketches is identified by literary critics as Hemingway himself.

Nick is the sensitive boy who runs away from home and becomes a hobo, as Hemingway did. He is revolted by the scum of the road and brutal bullies he meets in his wanderings. This is Nick Hemingway's first experience of horror. It is compounded when Nick (as Hemingway did) goes to war in 1917 on the Italian front, and takes a great wound.

Hemingway's stories are basically the chronicle of a man bloody and dazed under inexplicable blows of misfortune, getting up again to try to live by a code of wry gallantry.

Hemingway has done it himself.

Fear ridden by death after his first wounding by a mortar burst in 1918, Hemingway forced himself to a comeback. To fight his fears to live a full life, ever without hope.

FAITH RETURNS

He had lived a full life, a saga of war and love and fighting and sensation, to come to maturity in his middle age with an apparent faith in the future and some vestige of hope where before there was no faith.

For Hemingway, the turning point came about 1935.

Before that it was romantic to be the "lost" generation, the darlings of misfortune, deriding conventional values and living the life withdrawn and graceful.

Hemingway and his generation did just that, in their 20s and early 30s.

But their world blew up with the depression, and they who made a gallant game of despair in the boom days, and made a pose of being "lost" woke up suddenly to find that they really were lost. Hemingway no less than his generation came to realize that the vast imponderable forces that move the world were greater than individuals and that "no man is an island" sufficient unto himself.

GREENER HILLS

"The Green Hills of Africa" is Hemingway's confession. In it he bitterly castigates himself for frittering away the years since "A Farewell to Arms," his last real book, in a frenzied quest for sensation and pleasure. Hemingway grew up in 1926, and his later mentality is evident in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," his novel of the Spanish civil war.

It is growth as evidenced by the hero, Robert Jordan, who is willing to give his life in an attempt, the writer thought, to cooperate with the Spanish anti-fascists in defense of an ideal.

This concept that "no man is an island" that good must rely on other good men for the world to exist is a complete break with the earlier Hemingway who glorified the "code" men against the world.

This is also the first of Hemingway's stories in which even the hero must rely for help in travail.

There was still the undercurrent of despair and helplessness, however.

Hemingway at his mid-point, had not yet come to any hope. His hero and Hemingway had come to realize the necessity for man of goodwill, working together, to come to a belief in ideals and a democratic way of life. But they still could not believe that man and democracy had any possibility of ultimate triumph, however.

Thus Hemingway's Jordan had been too. For "Fort to believe yet in good but it was precious that they organized a duty to fight even in a lost cause instead of remaining aloof and aloof.

There is a curious remarkable parallel between Hemingway and his country.

The United states of Hemingway's youthful period was much like him, solipsistic, cynical, disillusioned — the part of the world determined by pleasure seeking in the Era of Wonderful Nonsense in the roaring 1920s.

The impact of the depression, and Second World War made the whole generation take stock of its values. From 1930 on this generation was to grope painfully for new standards to move into leadership in the field of international cooperation to take a stand for human dignity and individual rights in the face of totalitarianism.

Hemingway in middle age scarred, battered almost unrecognizable as the handsome youth he was in 1926 is still the spokesman for the middle-aged generation, as he was its spokesman in their salad days when they were making hash of old moral codes and experimenting with new standards of behavior.

LONG DESCENT

Hemingway's last two books "Across the River and Into the Trees" and "The Old Man and the Sea," are his first in which the heroes are aging men. The Col. Cantwell in "Across the River" is clearly Hemingway recognizing his own downhill slide into the short years left. It is far from his best book, but it is a heartened look at a great life greatly lived.

"The Old Man and the Sea" is very simply a masterpiece.

Santiago the old Cuban fisherman who is its hero is a radiant, new insight in Hemingway's development. Here for the first time and for the latest Hemingway expects a lasting quality of hope.

Santiago fights the great fish, and brings him at last to the boat only to lose him to the sharks, but Santiago's saga ends in no thought of despair and helplessness. Santiago going back to the sea to fish.

"I am a strange old man," Santiago remarks. "I may not be as I think but I have resolution."

There is clear identification of Hemingway with Santiago in this parable. Lillard Ross, in her vivid account of Hemingway in the New Yorker magazine, has Hemingway say of himself, "I am a strange old man."

Hemingway is a strange old man, rather wonderful even in his failings.

As spokesman and symbol for a generation lost that found itself to face up to the world more courageously, hope Hemingway has gained new stature as man and artist.

"I am trying to tell you that the hero is not the man who fights without fear. He is the man who fights in spite of fear, and who conquers his fear by the power of his will when he knows that his will is all he has left."

'4,000 Years Under . . .'

Philippe Diole, author of "4,000 Years Under the Sea."

4,000 YEARS UNDER THE SEA, by Philippe Diole. Julian Messner Inc.

Anyone who thinks that leaping into the sea, equipped with a helmet a tank of compressed air and a pair of frog's feet is only the latest form of aquatic sport should read this fascinating account of the rapid development of the science of marine archeology. For nearly a century the hunt has been pursued for the ruins of temples, opulent villas, huge marble columns, sunken ships, Greek and Roman weapons, works of art and other objects such as weapons, anchors, pottery and wine flasks. It was the men in massive diving suits, and now the young helmeted free swimmers of today who have brought this fascinating adventure within the reach of anyone who can find life tolerable 20 fathoms or more below the surface.

The author of "4,000 Years Under the Sea" is an elderly Frenchman who in this and a previous book has developed the philosophy and the science of the submarine world. "The moment has come," he writes, "for us to settle down for good and all at the very heart of the deep sea, trying for that purpose all the knowledge at our command, and finding in this new world a true delight." Until man recognizes that new world as his natural domain, his civilization will remain unchanged. He will be a dweller of one quarter only of the world's surface."

At present the happy hunting grounds for marine archeologists are the coasts of the ancient world where the Greek and Roman galleys and cargo carrying vessels sailed from the Near East to Africa and the shores of Spain and Britain. Before the days of Christ many of these ships were lost in storms. Others were sunk in battle. Still others were scuttled by their crews to avoid capture by pirates.

Diole tells how the author began his career as a diver, how he helped to discover the wreck of a Greek ship turned 2,000 years ago in sand and mud in the height of adventure. It may reveal treasures of art to be distributed to the museums, or symbols revealing secrets of forgotten races, perhaps simple processes of trade, a Gorgon's head or the stopper of a wine jar.

Every year something unknown and fabulous is rescued from the sea. A Greek fisherman brought to the surface a bronze arm belonging to the discovery of a colossal Zeus now in the Athens Museum; a large cargo ship was found off Africa filled with statues and the material for a marble temple dating back from the sack of Athens in 50 BC; immense columns of Carrara marble were found only three years ago near the French harbor of Saint Tropez, closely related to the more grandiose buildings of Italy in the imperial age. All traces of the overladen ship that carried it from Africa have disappeared. It is believed that they are parts of the huge temple at Narbonne, and the name of the man who built it is known, one Fadius Musa, an Imperial freedman, a shipowner and a wealthy merchant.

'Twas a One-Man Kon-Tiki

THE VOYAGE OF THE HERETIQUE, by Alan Boulard. New York: Simon & Schuster.

Adventure does not justify its own reward but Alan Boulard, botanist, physicist and a French physician at that, felt he needed a logical reason for sailing to cross the Atlantic single-handed in a unknown rubber dinghy. Experiment it may have been but what amounted to a two man Kon Tiki expedition.

Let's look first at the good doctor's reasons for undertaking the voyage. Some 200,000 people he tells us lose their lives every year in peace time shipwrecks. Most of them are fishermen. It is the author's contention that the great majority of these lives could be saved if the men concerned knew how to survive at the sea and the elements. How many seafaring ways he asks "have been killed not by the sea not by hunger or thirst, but by their own terror?"

Dr Bombard's solo expedition was designed therefore to prove that a man could live for weeks at sea on something like a life raft drawing sustenance only from the sea and sky. After a preliminary tryout in the Mediterranean our hardy medico set out last year from the Canary Isles in a rubber sailboat with a dragnet attached.

The voyage was, of course, fascinating as any such experience is bound to be. The traveler is close to the sea and its teeming life and as the Kon Tiki crewmen also discovered a vast variety of fish became the vessel's constant companions. There were times when Dr Bombard fathomed himself in a traveling aquarium to use his own simile. Half a dozen porpoise stayed with him so long they became almost family friends."

Not all these marine visitors were friendly, however. For one night of terror a huge swordfish kept making tentative attempts to attack the craft. One serious stab of its proboscis and the voyage would have ended then and there. But it swam off in the morning.

Dr Bombard recorded his experiences in a diary. While lacking in the color of the Kon Tiki chronicle, his book accords more weight to the scientific data and to his long periods of despair. It took him 60 days at sea before he finally made a landing in the Barbados, British West Indies.

An Executive Suitor

THE POWER AND THE PRIZE, by Howard Swiggett. New York: Ballantine Books.

Mr. Swiggett believes, with Hamlet that every man hath business and desire and this novel of his, every the best he has yet written, is about a man in whom business and desire are equally blended. As a novel of big business, it offers a few new perspectives of its own, since its business is international, too.

All this might lead you to suppose that the author is an American of European descent seeking to use the two backgrounds he knows best. Actually Mr. Swiggett is a 10th-generation Ohioan who happens to know the British like the does his own path hand. The out come is a most enjoyable novel about businessmen, intelligent and otherwise. True they still tend to pick up telephones for transatlantic calls as we pick up newspapers and they still talk about plants, processes and vice presidents the way we do about baseball or movies but Mr. Swiggett's heroine is an unusual woman who makes it necessary for her lover also to know something about music and literature and beauty.

In retrospect the plot isn't too vital to the pleasure of the story, though at the time it seems all important to the actors. An American corporation is dickering with a poor but proud British outfit for a new chemical process and for the right to develop a new source of raw materials in West Africa. Our negotiation is focussed on Cleves Barwick, the American negotiator, and a 10-generation American, too, by the ways and his dark-skinned counterpart, Carew.

Into all this Mr. Swiggett weaves a love story between Barwick and the attractive European refugee named Rachel Danka. This love story is played out on a thoroughly mature level with no attempt made to think the social problems solved by a marriage between Barwick and his Jewish mistress.

For the reviewer, however, the chief interest in the novel lay in its expert picture of big business at work. Here Mr. Swiggett is most convincing as he is in his portraits of the British characters. It would have been easy to slip up here, but he avoids the pitfalls of obviously as much at London, "shabby but mighty" as he is in New York. And this a clear, stripped narrative style and you have a serious novel of big business which may rival "Executive Suite" though it lacks the intensity of that book.

Hunter and the Hunted

THE YEAR OF THE LION, by Gerald Hanley. New York: The Macmillan Co.

It would be a pity if this fine novel were to be overlooked in the spate of African books this season. Not all of these books a score or more are as well written as this one and few of them, one fears, will be read by those who know that Africa as intimately as Mr Hanley does. His novel breathes Africa from every page. It is so obviously the product of one who has been a part of the life of the continent himself.

The Africa of this book is a hero in British East Africa, also probably Kenya and the time is the years before the Mau Mau appeared to cloud the white man's dream. Mr Hanley has given us a fairly convincing picture of Young Travis who came out from England to manage a farm. In the process of living and he also records a lasting love adventure on the subject of African girls as compared with Western girls. I have to mention another of the author's many skills, his ability to kill his hero, and I do not mean by accident. Jervis settles down on the farm we moved into the second and much more interesting part of the book, the story of a lion hunt. Mr Hanley has a wonderfully evocative account of Jervis' first night on the farm. He could hear Africa all around him, Africa which had waited for darkness to raise its voices. There were the maddening mosquitoes like the low whine of frantic zebras passing across the plain from the south, the soft creeping thing

The author makes a point that most Africans will tell you about the lion: they cannot have the balance of nature and antelope can multiply to the point of becoming pests to farmers. Across the years he spent and the farm he loved this cannot be allowed to remain. He also every excuse to kill his hero, and I do not mean by accident.

Four grizzly in 30 seconds, a hunting record of sorts which changed the writer's way of thought.

Four Grizzly Bears The Kill... Contrition

By FRANCIS DICKIE

TRUTH is stranger than fiction; but bear hunting stories as told by many hunters are stranger than both. This one is true.

At a lonely siding on the Pacific Great Eastern Railway at Anderson Lake, British Columbia, one day in the first week in June, my companion, Jack Rognon, and I landed from the mixed freight and passenger train, on our way to hunt grizzly.

The next morning we began our walk inland and upward to where the huge beasts were said to roam. We had to go 15 miles to the cabin of a prospector friend. In it were snowshoes. We packed 40 pounds each far too much for the kind of country we were faced with. For some distance had been cut a foot wide trail. Now this was continuously blocked by wind felled trees.

IN STILL AIR

As we mounted higher the blazing heat faded. The riot growth of vegetation ended. The air became cool. Miles of towering, snow-covered peaks lay before us, a haunting sense of infinity in their forlorn firing on and on into unknown distance.

At dark we struck snow, soft, melting treacherous snow. On the steep mountain side it lay from five to ten feet deep. This we had not expected as our snowshoes were in the cabin eight miles beyond. We floundered forward sometimes to the armpits, sometimes to the hip nearly always to the knee. Photograph 1 gives some idea.

We reached the cabin at 11 o'clock four hours and a half to go about three miles. When we arrived the cabin was buried in snow. June 10. Next day we put on snowshoes carrying a 40lb tent and provisions for a week. Everywhere was snow. In places where the going was too steep for snow shoes we had to take them off and flounder. Some of the difficulties going is shown in photograph 2.

The snow was blinding under the sun. We put on our snow glasses.

DEATHLY CALL

Early in the afternoon we saw four grizzlies feasting on a kill 1,500 on the mountain side to our west across a creek. As we watched several leaping bores one a three came rumbling down the five to six mile slope to one of us. It may have been an unshot spring away. Untied a more pleasantry on its part: back a madly courageous thing perhaps he was telling a bear joke to his companions. To me this was one of the most terrorstriking sounds ever heard. In it the mutter of thunder with an added deadly something beyond pen to tell.

We began a long, low stalking our object was to get above the bears, as in the mountains the air currents veer with peculiar freakishness. Once above them sufficiently we off set this danger.

Crawling cautiously, gasping for breath we went up the steep ascent. We climbed higher. For perhaps 200 yards we lost sight of the quarry owing to the fold in the mountain side and again, after we had moved above them, while we took advantage of a line of dwarf spruce.

A LONG CLIMB

Then we had to come out into the open. Wriggling forward on our stomachs our eyes looked upon the side where we had last seen the bears feeding. They were gone but not lost to sight. During our long slow climb which must have taken an hour they had moved down to a shelf of rock protruding from the sandy overlay. It jutted out perhaps 20 feet. There they lay asleep, warm in the sun, four magnificent creatures serene in security of their solitariness. Though we had reached within 200 yards by their experienced compass we decided to go still nearer. That sitting ledge was our goal and their doom. For even had they winded they would not see us. We got within 50 feet a fair distance in grizzly hunting circles.

LEAPING LIFE

We rose cautiously, took aim [illegible] and shot the four sleeping beasts. One burst into the air as though it had been electrified. Then it fell back dead. Another sprang from a perfect head shot. It was astounding. Afterwards we gaze open-eyed. In the next 60 seconds leaping bores one a three came rumbling down the five to six mile slope to one of us. It may have been an unshot spring away. Untied a more pleasantry on its part: back a madly courageous thing. And that look he gave us as he paused one brief second staring up at us! Then mouth open, up he charged heroically. Even as I fired, my heart honored that grand dumb creature. Swift, strong fearless to avenge and reckless of consequences, toward the mouths of the guns he came, brave brave beast only to die. My bullet went into his chest through his heart. He crumpled on that mountain side, a wasted heap where he had roamed happy free. The third bear fell to my companion's rifle only a few feet from the largest which apparently was its mother. The fourth, I had wounded mortally yet it ran to lie on a little bare fold beyond the snow strip.

SILENCE AGAIN

Abruptly the enormous silence of the gathered mountains returned upon us. We had four grizzlies the largest nine feet two inches in length, the smallest six feet six. All these in the space of 30 seconds, a world record of sorts. They had been dropped so near each other that despite their weight, we could lay them together for a photograph.

There they lay upon the snow, a pitiful mass where so short a time before had been life, gladness, movement under the sun.

And all about us as far as the eyes could look, white peaks reared in even unmiss, astere loneliness and forbidding as rushing waves infinitely vast suddenly frozen forever still in a chaotic and frightening universe.

And looking upon those four limp piles of flesh and fur, I was overwhelmed with sadness. We had come into this region where these huge beasts dwelt in solitary grandeur moving unknown their days as by nature ordained but doing no one harm and we had slaughtered them without necessity.

In this hour mine of contrition was born a resolution never again to go forth with the intention to shoot any living creature except in time of dire need of food or self protection.

A 12-foot bear probably a record in B.C., if not the world.

Man With a Million— Cannot Spend a Dime

BY ED KOWALEWSKI
North American Newspaper Alliance

FEW persons these days can say they're "rolling in money." Least of all the traditionally underpaid college professor.

However there is a professor at Canisius College in Buffalo who should he so fancy could literally roll in his and even invite a few friends over to share in the fun.

Dr John A Muscalus head of Canisius' education department has spent so much of his adult life in a fairly common pursuit collecting money.

But his pursuit has two uncommon aspects.

First in approximately 25 years he has amassed upward of $1,000,000 in paper bills, ranging in face value from fractional one-cent notes to a $3,000 bill.

Second his money would get him little else at the grocery store than a puzzled look or maybe even a hurried call for the police. However, while the grocer might raise a question regarding how the knowing collector conceivably would turn greener than a greenback with envy at the sight of the professor's horde.

BEGAN AS HOBBY

Dr. Muscalus, who collects forgotten money of other eras believes he has the world's largest collection of early American currency. He values it at $250,000 [illegible] money.

He stumbled onto his hobby by chance while a student at the University of Pennsylvania in 1926.

"In history classes there was a lot of talk about "wildcat money" but no one could ever produce any," Dr. Muscalus recalled. "So I decided to try to find some just to see what it looked like."

His first purchase was in a Philadelphia shop a Confederate $10 bill which he recalls cost him 10 or 15 cents.

From that simple beginning his collection has grown at a pace approximating somewhat that of the national debt.

He has scoured shops in New York, Philadelphia Boston and bills. He has bought up entire collections and traded with other collectors.

BIG COLLECTION

His collection now numbers 10,000 distinctly different specimens of currency, many of them duplicates.

The collection spans the period 1776 to 1863.

His collection shows that the note-issuers in those days ranged from every known political subdivision village town, city county and state as well as libraries schools railroads, bridge companies and similar industries and institutions.

"The average shopper in those days," Dr. Muscalus said, might find 50 different kinds of paper money in his pocket."

One of the drawbacks of this diversified money era, however, was that a note was not always worth the same amount in every place. Wary banks and merchants not knowing the financial stability of the issuing agency invariably would redeem at a discount. As a result, a traveler's dollar might get him 100 cents in groceries in one place and perhaps not that many peanuts in another.

Some of the less stable institutions took various precautions to discourage disastrous runs. One of these was to make their notes redeemable at a faraway bank. Dr Muscalus mentions, for instance including a note of the bank of Muscogee County, Michigan redeemable at the Bank of Tonawanda, New York.

A variety of designs decorated the currency. Prominent people and scenes appeared on the paper money. Some Western banks even enlivened their currency with portraits of nudes. A note of Washington and a note that carried the picture of both President Millard Fillmore and James Buchanan. Still another [illegible] in the quaint old days passers-by were in for variety in denominations. Dr. Muscalus [illegible] shows a French [illegible] notes of 5 10 25 50 and 75 cents were not uncommon and he has an obsolete Bank of Utica (N.Y.) note.

PACIFIC WRECK

Some of the disasters had to do with steam propelled vessels. Out of Victoria for San Francisco with 230 passengers in 1875, the SS. Pacific collided with the sailing ship Orpheus below the cape and went down leaving only two survivors, while Orpheus later went ashore near Cape Beale and became a total loss. The passenger ship SS. Valencia overran her reckoning and was wrecked near Carmanah Point on a quiet night with great loss of life.

Kiwanis Village Drive To Build More Homes

The Hon. Wesley Black, provincial secretary, and Mrs. Black visit the village and chat with Mr. T. Bell who has been a resident in the Village for three months and is very happy in his new home.

Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:30 Victoria will be covered by members of the Kiwanis Club and other volunteers seeking to raise $30,000.

The reason of the drive is to build more homes at the Kiwanis Village where 44 of Victoria's older citizens are now residing.

The aim is to build ten more double units for elderly couples and eight single units. So far there are no single units. That fact has prevented couples from going to the Village as the idea of having to move if one is widowed has been a stumbling block. The single units are to prevent such an occurrence so that once a person is a resident of the Village he or she may stay there.

The Kiwanis Village Society of which Mr. Ed Mallek is president is staffed completely by volunteer officials.

The proposed new additions will take care of 28 more older people. In the short period that the Village has been in existence the few who are living there have found life most pleasant.

Charles Craig, architect of the Village homes is seen with the model of the complete village which is now on display at the Kiwanis Village headquarters in the Old Colonist building.

She carried a bouquet of pale pink talisman roses and lily of the valley.

As her sister's only attendant Miss Laura Mae Hallsor chose a ballerina length gown of pink moon sheer over taffeta styled with cap sleeves and gathered bodice. Her headdress and shoes were in matching pink and her flowers were rose Talisman carnations.

Mr. Stuart Crawford of Great Central Lake brother-in-law of the bride was best man and Mr. John Dell ushered.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where Mr. Donald Duff proposed the bride's toast. The three-tier wedding cake was decorated with silver vases and pink roses. Servitrices were Mrs. Stuart Crawford sister of the bride Miss Diane Heaney and Miss Dana Thompson.

For a honeymoon motor trip to Portland Mrs. McLean donned a grey suit with grey and white plaid stole and white accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias and lily of the valley.

Shirts News For Summer

The shirt is for every day and has many phases so you can't escape it. Shirt blouses shown for summer are sleeveless or have puffed sleeves with the shirt cuff moved up, and these are perfect for those who prefer to mix their separates.

Sheer cotton fabrics make the shirtwaist dress considerably more dressy. Use lace for straps and strands of big pearls. Elegance results when shirtwaist dresses are featured in silks. Softened shirtwaists make an entrance in cottons with dainty embroideries and the plain shirtwaist is revamped when done in flower spring prints.

U.S. May Try To Chart Phantom Antarctic Coast

BY THOMAS R. HENRY

WASHINGTON (NANA) — The least known region on earth, where man never has set foot, would be explored this winter under the provisions of a bill now before the U.S. congress.

It is the easternmost corner of Antarctic waters in midsummer with more than 24 hours of daylight in which to work.

The expedition would be headed under the terms of the bill, by Cmdr. Finn Ronne, leader of the 1947-48 expedition which based near the southwestern extremity of the Palmer Peninsula and made extensive contributions to Antarctic geography. Among the major achievements was confirmation of the hypothesis that the 6,000,000-square-mile polar continent is essentially split in two by a frozen strait of unknown width.

Ronne, son of one of Capt. Roald Amundsen's party in the epochal discovery of the South Pole nearly half a century ago, has practically grown up in Antarctic exploration. He was with Adm. Richard E. Byrd on his 1933-35 expedition and was second in command during the 1939-41 explorations.

The announced objectives of this new expedition are explorations for mineral resources, additional mapping and "validation of territorial claims of the United States." The Phantom Weddell coast reaches into territory claimed roughly by both Great Britain and Argentina.

PRELUDE TO BIG PLAN

The expedition can be considered a preliminary to the most ambitious south polar program ever proposed. Planned for 1957-58 and including the setting up of an observation station at the South Pole itself, this would be carried out under auspices of the National Science Foundation.

The Weddell Sea that would be explored is one of the two great embayments of the southern ice mass. It is almost directly across the continent from the Ross sea area, whose shores have started the two successful trips to the pole and were near all expeditions have been based.

The area is practically barred from access by sea. A strong coastal current brings in vast quantities of pack ice through which it is almost impossible to navigate. The few ships which have attempted the passage, including those of the British explorer James Weddell, for whom the sea is named, have reported only "appearances of land" per haps mountains perhaps icebergs.

Most exploration of the phantom coast would need to be carried out by air from the other side of the peninsula although some land treks may be attempted.

Ronne's objective will be to so co-ordinate scattered observations made by expeditions of Admiral Byrd and the late Lincoln Ellsworth and previously by himself that the phantom coast will become a reality.

Previous observations indicate that back of this coast is a rather low mountain range through whose passes great glaciers flow out of the inland ice cap to fall into the sea in majestic frozen Niagaras.

The bill asks that two naval vessels and four aircraft be assigned to the expedition and that, on a volunteer basis, service personnel be allowed to take part while retaining duty status.

Directors of the American Antarctic Association, already busy with plans for the operation are Gen. Bertl Batchelor, Lowell Thomas, Sir Hubert Wilkins, Dr. Lawrence M. Gould of Carleton College who is now co-ordinating the Antarctic program for the forthcoming international polar year, Dr. John K. Wright of the American Geographical Society, Edgar Vetlesen of Scandinavian Airlines. Prof. Edward C. Sweeney of Northwestern University and Dr. Harold M. Lardy of the American Council of Commercial Laboratories.

Dance Set To Aid Playground

A dance will be held Wednesday at Hampton Hall by the Meadow Park playground committee to raise funds for improvements of the playground at Desmet and Ker Avenues.

Stan Cross and his orchestra will provide music for dancing from 9 to 12. Supper will be provided. Tickets for the dance may be obtained from Mrs. R. J. Grant, 4-7238; Mrs. G. A. O'Brian, 2-1037, and Mrs. G. Kaiser, 2-1479.

Eight midget soccer players from Meadow Park playground were among 22 players chosen in Greater Victoria to play during the interval of the recent Cosgrave Rangers-Victoria All Blacks game.

Lawson Funeral Monday

Funeral will be held at 3 p.m. Monday for Margaret Gladys Lawson, 33, of 156 Kerr, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital Friday.

She was the wife of Kenneth C. Lawson and the mother of a son, Kenneth Craig, and an infant daughter, Sharon Margaret.

She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dewhurst, one brother, Edward and a sister, Florence, all of Victoria.

Services will be held from Hayward's Funeral Home. Rev. A. Roberts officiating.

Burial will be at Colwood Burial Park.

Calgary Banks Bilked of $3,200

CALGARY (CP) — A phony [illegible] obtained $3,200 after passing certified cheques at five Calgary banks during a whirlwind operation Friday.

Seven banks were visited during the two hours he worked and he was successful four times. He was nearly caught twice as police arrived three minutes after his hasty departure.

High-pressure salesmen from all over the world go into action Monday in Toronto, when the seventh Canadian International Trade Fair opens. The atmosphere, although highly competitive, is expected to remain friendly as 27 countries exhibit their wares at a time when world trade barriers are gradually being lowered. For the first time, such countries as Germany, Japan and Italy are meeting on fairly equal terms to bid for customers.

Peace River Fights Flood

PEACE RIVER, Alta. (CP)—Residents of this northern foothills town of 1,700 pitched in with RCMP and air force crews Friday night to fortify with sandbags the low east bank of the rampaging Peace River.

The river rose more than four feet during a 24-hour period.

Seven thousand sandbags from Alberta civil defense headquarters in Edmonton, 250 miles southeast, were flown here by an RCAF Dakota to help cope with what officials believed would develop into this farming town's first major flood since 1946.

The town's only vulnerable spot is a short stretch of low bank just downstream from where the Smoky River, flowing down from the mountains, forms the confluence that begins the northbound Peace.

Still Soldier's Best Friend

Deeper Foxholes Atom Protection

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—The old foxhole is still the soldier's best friend, even against an atomic bomb, but he will have to dig it deeper and bigger, the army has found.

Lessons learned in two simulated atomic bomb bursts against the 40th Division were outlined Saturday by Capt. John S. Anderson of San Francisco, atomic warfare officer for the exercises.

The foxhole must be bigger and much deeper than before, he reported. Cover and dispersion are absolute musts against such attacks.

An estimated 1,100 casualties were reported by umpires in the games after the two bombs were dropped. Blast effects accounted for only a few of the simulated bursts, since the body is semi-gelantinous and gives with the blast.

HEAT MOST DANGEROUS

Most of the casualties were blamed on heat effects. Anderson reported almost any clothing is excellent cover against the scorching temperatures generated, but the lighter colored the clothing the better the heat reflection and the less the injury.

Radiation was virtually discounted militarily. A soldier close enough to a lethal dose of radiation will already be dead of burns.

"There are only two protective measures for the atomic bomb," Captain Anderson reported, "cover and dispersal. The foot soldier must dig in deep and quickly.

"Cover provides the soldier with protection from heat and the missiles created by shatter-effects of the bomb. Pebbles become bullets and straws become spears. Should a soldier be in the open, even the smallest of debris can wound him fatally."

Also elected at the club's annual meeting were Gordon McMillan, vice-president; Ken Clarke, secretary; Chick Will, treasurer; and Bob Whysker, registrar.

Mel Willie, George Preston and Ted Hamer were appointed to the board of directors.

Brigade Veterans Meet at Reunion

Nearly 100 veterans—some of whom had not met their old comrades in nearly 40 years—gathered at Bay Street Armory last night to celebrate the 38th anniversary of their departure from Victoria for the First World War.

It was the first reunion some of them had ever attended.

Te 15th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, left Victoria for overseas service May, 28, 1916. Last night they gathered again, from all over British Columbia, from Washington and from as far south as San Francisco.

The program was arranged by Ralph Cruickshanks, Gordon Cameron, Ted King, Archie Wills, Percy Glison, Alf Dowell, Joyce Collins, Doug Morry and Dan McBrady.

TOAST GIVEN

The toast to the brigade was given by Harry Boyle, of Penticton, who was attending his first reunion with his old buddies. He was a driver in the brigade.

Highlight of the reunion was the screening of pictures of the brigade's day at Macaulay Plains here, at Pelawawa, Ont., Whitley, England, and in France, Belgium and Germany.

Trim Racers Start Annual Swiftsure Classic

Most thrilling ocean sailboat race of the Pacific Northwest, the Swiftsure Classic, started from Victoria yesterday morning and should finish here between noon and 3 p.m. this afternoon. In the foreground at left is the Elusive which when last reported last night was in fourth place. Centre foreground is the Gometra from Vancouver.

Leading the race is the 67-foot-long yawl Maruffa, which in 1952 was first over the finishing line. She was expected to round the Swiftsure Lightship about 2 a.m. this morning on first lap of 126-mile ocean race.

But Polho III Favored

Maruffa Leading Swiftsure Racers

The 67-foot yawl Maruffa, owned and skippered by John Graham of the Seattle Yacht Club, took an early lead yesterday in the Swiftsure race and was expected to be first around the Swiftsure Lightship at an early hour this morning.

But favored to win the Pacific Northwest racing classic is the Polho III, owned by H. E. Richmond of the Seattle Yacht Club, which at 9.24 last night was following the American coast and running in third place.

Because of a handicap of approximately three hours in time the Polho III is favored to win. She was formerly the Gossip, owned by Charlie Ross, which last year romped home to its third Swiftsure win.

It won the 150-mile ocean race in 1949, 1950 and 1953, finished second in 1952 and missed the race in 1951.

The Maruffa carries a crew of 10 and is well known here. In 1952 she was first to cross the finishing line in the race. She has a handicap rating of 49.8 which is the biggest in the race at this time.

She will have to be away ahead of all other boats to win the event.

By 9.24 last night five of the 15 sailing craft had dropped out of the race.

The Armilda, skippered by Karl Hostetter of Seattle, left the race at 3.55 because of lost gear and returned to Victoria.

Alotola, skippered by C. J. Frisbie of Seattle Corinthian Yacht Club, dropped out at 4.30 p.m. and returned to Victoria.

The Jenetta, owned by Doug and Wavell Urry of Vancouver, biggest yacht in the race and a favorite to win, dropped out at 4.28 p.m. and returned to Vancouver.

At 3.30 p.m., the Clree, skippered by Ray Cooke of Seattle, split her mainsail and returned to Seattle.

The Red Jacket, skippered by G. H. Parsons of Seattle Yacht Club, lost her mainsail early in the race, but hoisted another late last night and was again making its way up to the lead.

Positions at 9.24 p.m. were the Maruffa in the lead, followed at about two miles behind by the 52½-foot yawl Dorade, Seattle, about eight miles southwest of Port Renfrew.

The Polho III was a few miles to the east and nearer to the American coast. About eight miles to the rear was the Elusive in the centre of the strait followed by Adios, of Seattle, and Victoria's lone entry, Dragoon, skippered by W. B. Holms.

SMALLEST ENTRY

Smallest entry in the race, the Totem of Corinthian, was nearer the American coast around Clallam Bay. About 10 miles behind was the Gometra of Vancouver with the Colonist's Roy Murdock on board, followed by Reverie of Tacoma in the centre of the strait and Westward Ho of Seattle and Red Jacket of Corinthian.

Hundreds of Dallas Road spectators watched the start of the annual race yesterday morning at 10. Many hundred more are expected to watch the yachts cross the finish line at Brotchie Ledge this afternoon.

Experts predict that first boats will arrive back here between noon and 3 p.m. this afternoon.

Ship Ends Testing Of Germs

LONDON (Reuters) — The Royal Navy confirmed yesterday that a British tank landing ship, Ben Lomond, has returned to Nassau after carrying out secret germ warfare tests in the Caribbean area.

The Ben Lomond was converted into a floating laboratory for the tests, which were made off the shipping routes and 20 miles from the nearest inhabited island.

Parley Might Ease Tension

GUATEMALA (AP) — Guatemala's president Jacobo Arbenz said Saturday a personal meeting between President Eisenhower and himself, "if it should take place, would help to ease the present tense situation in Central America."

Majority Reduced

Australians Return Menzies Government

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — Prime Minister Robert Menzies' Liberal-Country party coalition was returned to power yesterday with a reduced majority in Australia's 121-seat House of Representatives.

With final results still to be announced, the standing is expected to be:

Liberal-Country Party coalition—65.

Labor—56.

This would represent a switch of three seats.

Menzies, who ousted the Labor government in 1945, will now be able to turn his attention to major foreign policy decisions which were shelved during the election campaign. Chief among them is Australia's attitude toward a collective defense system for Southeast Asia and the western Pacific.

FREE OF PRESSURE

The five-power review of the Far East military situation, scheduled to open in Washington next Thursday, will now be able to get Australia's views free from electoral pressure.

Menzies' victory came as a surprise in many quarters, since private polls had indicated the gradual swing to Labor would bring back Herbert Evatt as prime minister.

Actually, Labor has received more votes than the coalition of ballots counted so far.

Sir Edmund Fighting For Life

NEW DELHI, India (UP) — Sir Edmund Hillary, who conquered Mount Everest exactly one year ago, fought for his life today on the slopes of another Himalayan mountain.

Precisely a year after he climbed the world's highest mountain, Hillary was being carried down from the 22,500-foot heights of the great Barun glacier with a broken rib and pneumonia.

There was virtually no news of his present plight, but the descent was a race to get out of the mountains before the vicious spring monsoon rains start next week.

Hillary broke a rib rescuing James McFarlane, another member of his expedition.

Although there was no definite word from the Hillary group, it was believed that an American expedition from California had rushed penicillin and an oxygen tent from Mount Makalu to help the New Zealander.

Armistice Violated

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United Nations command has directly charged the Communists with violating the Korean armistice by moving war planes and other military equipment into North Korea, it was disclosed Saturday.

Saanich Gives Solid 'No' To School Loan Proposal

Only 778 Voters Back Referendum

Saanich School District 63 voters yesterday gave an emphatic "no" to a proposed $1,460,000 school loan referendum to provide new classroom space during the next five years.

Just over 30 per cent of the 5,178 voters turned out to vote 1,143 against the by-law and 778 for it.

Both the unorganized territory and Central Saanich sections of the sprawling school district voted a solid "no" vote, but the part of the district that lies within the boundaries of the Saanich municipality proper were for the building program.

The referendum was planned to provide facilities for an anticipated school population increase of 1,000 children during the next five years. Present attendance in the school district is 1,900 pupils.

"Let's see what the ratepayers tell us now," G. F. Gilbert, school board chairman of School District 63 said last night. "The school kids will have to stick their heads out of the school windows or go to school in swing shifts," he said.

In an official statement he said: "The board regrets the ratepayers have found it necessary to turn down the by-law referendum. The trustees did their best to acquaint the ratepayers with the district's school requirements. These still exist. What now is the ratepayers' wish?"

FEELING APPARENT

But talk around polling booths yesterday indicated the feeling of the ratepayers toward the proposed program.

"Too many frills. When they get down to brass tacks and build something for reading, writing and arithmetic we will be all for it," said one Brentwood man.

A North Saanich man said: "By the time my two children have filled all their extra-curricular activities they are too worn out to do their homework."

Another man said he would vote "yes" when the school children learned something at school. He claimed that nowadays they couldn't even spell properly or even do simple arithmetic.

Another voter claimed threat of swing-shifts was used as a bogey to make people vote "yes." A farmer said: "If this goes on much longer they will tax us out of existence."

'NO' VOTE URGED

This feeling was echoed by many voters who urged a "no" vote on "all of these things until such time as a more equitable form of financing was found."

Reeve Pickles' earlier charges of a "blank cheque" was enlarged upon by a Brentwood voter. "I wouldn't even give my wife a blank cheque, and I think a lot of her," he said.

A Brentwood woman agreed new schools were needed. "We need schools. Everyone agrees with that, but we need schools to be used as schools and not social houses for the children," she said.

George L. Chatterton, by-law committee chairman, said yesterday that if the by-law was defeated the provincial government would be asked to incorporate part of rural Saanich School District 63.

The school district now includes the north part of Saanich, Central Saanich, Sidney and unorganized territory. Mr. Chatterton, who is a school trustee, said the present school district was unsatisfactory because it was divided between an urban and rural population whose needs differed entirely.

"I understand the problem and the views of the population," he said. "Their interests are not compatible."

He said he would give serious consideration to the question of incorporating the north part of Saanich, which includes Royal Oak and Cordova Bay with the Greater Victoria school system. Another alternative, he said, was the forming of a separate school district for the municipality of Saanich.

Saanich council has already requested the government to form a separate school district for the municipality on the grounds that the present system is unfair to some of the taxpayers. The greater part of the municipality, the inner section, is linked with Greater Victoria School District 61.

LAST APPROVED

Yesterday's by-law referendum was the first submitted to District 63 ratepayers since 1950. The last one, for only $600,000, was approved by a slim 55-vote majority.

Result by polls:

| | Yes | No |
|---|---|---|
| Sidney | 106 | 261 |
| North Saanich | 29 | 63 |
| Deep Cove | 62 | 113 |
| McTavish Road | 26 | 101 |
| Sansbury | 43 | 50 |
| Brentwood | 58 | 123 |
| Saanichton | 15 | 85 |
| Keating | 59 | 59 |
| Mount Newton | 8 | 11 |
| Cordova Bay | 143 | 120 |

French Break Siege

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—Five thousand French Union troops, including mobile artillery units, Saturday broke the Vietminh siege of Yen Phu, in the biggest offensive by the French since the fall of Dien Bien Phu. The rebels scattered into the hills around Phy Ly, 30 miles south of Hanoi, under heavy air, artillery and ground attack.

Yen Phu, a strategic defense post six miles from the big communications centre of Phy Ly, had been under siege for 18 days. Its defending garrison of only 160 men had been supplied by air.

French pilots dropped arms and supplies to two other small delta posts which have been under rebel siege for about a week. They were Xathi and Tayam, about 25 miles southwest of Haiphong, the big port city which receives most of the American supplies for the Indo-China fighting.

Tanks, armored cars and infantry drove from the Nam Dinh and Phy Ly sectors to relieve Yen Phu.

Assassin Misses Premier

TUNIS, Tunisia (UP) — A would-be assassin fired two shots at Tunisian Premier Mohammed M'Zali yesterday, but missed, police reported.

Police said the gunman shot at the recently appointed premier as he left his office to meet French Resident-General Pierre Voizard, who returned yesterday from Paris. The would-be assassin escaped through the narrow streets of the old Arab city.

The shooting was the climax of recent unrest in this French protectorate and Morocco.

Reports from Casablanca in the neighboring North African territory said terrorists roamed streets in a car this morning shooting at pedestrians, wounding four Moroccans.

Damsel Sends Duelers Hurrying Off to Pub

OXFORD, England (UP) — Undergraduates Ronnie Eden and Alastair Forsyth stood back to back, marched 12 paces, then turned and fired blank cartridges at each other in a "duel" over a woman in a meadow behind Christ Church College.

The "woman"—pretty art student Prudence Taylor—arrived at the scene on the arm of a third man and applauded loudly.

Eden and Forsyth glared at her and went to a nearby pub to buy each other a drink.

Cheerful Army To Aid Village

A cheerful army of more than 1,700 men and women will call at every home in the Victoria area between 6.30 and 7.30 p.m. Monday seeking 30,000 "happiness dollars" to finance the completion of Kiwanis Village for deserving senior citizens.

Success of the drive will mean that low-rent homes can be built at the village on Cedar Hill Road for a total of 80 elderly citizens who otherwise would find it difficult or impossible to make both ends meet on their low, fixed incomes.

The village now provides homes for 22 elderly couples.

DOZEN MORE

The $30,000 objective of the drive will build 12 more double-occupancy homes and eight for single occupants who will vacate double unit homes.

While accommodation will be provided for 80 senior citizens at any one time, over the years the total will be much greater than this, due to turnover in occupancy.

Today has been declared Senior Citizens' Day at Kiwanis Village.

The S. J. Willis Junior High School senior band will give a concert on the grounds of the village between 2.30 and 4 p.m. and at the same time the public will have an opportunity of seeing the arrangement and general character of the village.

PRIVATE STREET

Kiwanis Village is located on the west side of Cedar Hill Road in the 2900 block. All homes face on Hibberson Crescent, a private road running through the property.

First six units of the village were opened and occupied last July. Another 16 dwellings have been completed and occupied since the beginning of this year.

The Victoria Kiwanis Club, keenly aware of the fact that Victoria has more than the average number of senior citizens who must get by on small pensions, decided to build the village several years ago.

The village has been designed to provide low-rent homes for deserving elderly couples, who through no fault of their own have seen their savings diminish or been wiped out entirely by the inflation of the past few years, and now find it a real hardship to exist on their pensions or small fixed incomes.

$250,000 SPENT

Some $250,000 has already been spent in construction, made up of a provincial government grant, a mortgage and contributions by Kiwanis Club members and some interested members of the public.

The $30,000 which Kiwanians hope to gain in their one-hour drive Monday is the proportion being asked of the public of an estimated $100,000 required to build 20 more housing units.

Villagers enjoy a feeling of independence which most of them could not enjoy if they felt they were accepting charity.

They pay $20 a month rent plus a fixed fee for electricity for lighting, heating and cooking.

Aged couples know they will be able to remain at the village as long as they live and that they will not have to separate and be forced to enter institutions because of economic circumstances.

Contributions to the village-completion drive will enable more senior citizens to enjoy a life of serenity, and this is why Kiwanians are calling on Victoria citizens to "invest your Happiness Dollars in Kiwanis Village."

Contributions to the drive are deductible for income tax purposes.

Modest Pope Pius X Proclaimed Saint

ROME (UP)—Pope Pius X, a man who never wanted to be a bishop, a cardinal or a pope, was proclaimed a saint of the Roman Catholic Church yesterday.

ST. PIUS

Pope Pius XII, who was made a monsignor by Saint Pius X, performed the outdoor ceremony before an estimated 350,000 persons jammed into massive St. Peter's Square and adjoining streets. The crowd included an all-time record 70,000 pilgrims from other lands, including many from the United States.

A hot sun that sent the mercury into the 80's beat down on the cheering throngs representative of the millions more gathered at their radios around the world for the first canonization of a pope in 342 years. Bright red and orange umbrellas, shields against the sun, added to the colorful scene in the square.

In a speech to the assembled crowd and the radio listeners, the 78-year-old reigning pope expressed the wish that the spirit of the new saint would "penetrate the conference halls of nations" to help in banishing forever "the fear of cataclysms."

Pius XII invoked the new saint directly, asking him to "bring it about that this troubled world witness the triumph of that peace which should mean harmony among nations."

The present pope, recently recovered from a serious illness, proclaimed firmly in Latin from his throne of gold: ". . . We decree and define saint and inscribe in the book of saints the blessed Pope Pius X . . ."
